VOTE for Samuel Butler for State Treasurer.

AS THE days pass by the outlook for a Republican victory in Ohio grows brighter and brighter.

NEW YORK seems to be patterning after California. It has five candidates for Governor in the field.

AS ELECTION day approaches in Ohio all indications point to a Republican victory more strongly than ever.

HIS Excellency, Lord Augustus Loftus, had the honor of opening Australia's Industrial Exhibition, at Sydney, on 17th ult.

LORD BEACONSFIELD'S sun is setting. In consequence of his blunders of late a meeting was held in London on Saturday to denounce his government.

UNCLE CIPHER, the great American plotter, is still burrowing, and the hostiles are worried almost to pieces for fear he'll come up under some of them.

OF NEW YORK'S five candidates for Governor, not one of them, as strange as it may seem, has so far been called a Government thief or a murderer. The candidates are as much surprised as anybody about it.

THE Republicans of Texas are getting stirred up. When the good news from Maine reached them they held a big meeting of rejoicing, and fired a hundred guns on receiving the news that General Grant had arrived at San Francisco.

SECRETARY EVARTS is credited with the following pithy and truthful remark concerning the South: "The South went into rebellion and lost all but her honor. The South went into Congress and lost all she had saved from rebellion."

THE complete returns in Maine show that the Republicans have elected nineteen Senators and nineteen members of the House of Representatives. Not much comfort in those figures for Democrats. When the old Pine Tree State gets down to business she usually gives a good account of herself.

JOHN KELLY is upsetting things promiscuously in New York, and is trying to create as much confusion as possible in the Democratic ranks. The "boss" is nominating candidates for the Legislatur in the interior counties, through his followers, and by other equally significant movements, shows that he has something beside the defeat of Robinson in view.

THE only office to fill this fall is that of State Treasurer, and yet Hendricks B. Wright is working harder for the success of the Democratic party than last year, when there was a governor to elect. He has even telegraphed to Kearney, the San Francisco idiot, to come up and help the Democrats in this State. Why is this thus? Does Mr. Wright see, through the election of Barr, an opportunity to put his hand into the public Treasury?

SOUTHERN editors are still talking Jeff Davis up for the United States Senate. A Mississippi paper says that "Mississippians will honor their State and confer a great favor on the people of the whole country by sending Jefferson Davis to the U. S. Senate." But the country doesn't look at it in that light. A poltroon and traitor to his country occupying a seat in the United States Senate would be a grand spectacle! Jefferson Davis will have all he can do, during the balance of his existence, to atone for his wickedness of the past, and make himself presentable to his Maker.

How to Maintain the Poor.

During the fore part of the year of 1877 the Court ordered an election to be held in Centre county on April 21st of that year, for the purpose of accepting or rejecting the law authorizing the creation of county almshouses. The vote as cast was 1510 for, to 3003 against. In our borough the vote stood as follows:

	For.	Against.
North Ward	128	11
South "	78	17

making a majority of 210 in favor of a change in the mode of maintaining the poor.

Notwithstanding the decided vote in Bellefonte in favor of a change, no effort was made to comply with the wishes of the people to curtail the expenses until now. Major Geo. A. Bayard was elected one of the overseers last February, who, when he was sworn into office, found a very large indebtedness due several merchants, amounting to several hundred dollars over and above all taxes assessed. The Major was not long in deciding that the only way out of the dilemma was an increase of taxes or a curtailment of current expenses. The Major chose the latter, and, with an eye to accomplishing that end, has leased the Willowbank house, which contains twenty rooms—ample space to accommodate all those who come under his charge. There is no doubt but that Mr. Bayard can maintain the poor at much better advantage, and be more humane to them, than by the old way of letting them out to the lowest bidders. At all events, the vote of this borough at the election of 1877 was so decidedly in favor of a change that Mr. Bayard would not be justified in following in the footsteps of his predecessors by continuing the old method.

Wherever proper buildings have been provided, the expenses have been greatly reduced. We refer to one case in particular: About the time the election was held in this county, there was a special court in session at which Judge Elwell, of Bloomsburg, Columbia Co., presided as President Judge. In a conversation which took place in the Bush House by a number of gentlemen in relation to the maintenance of the poor, the Judge stated that a few years prior a complaint was made to the Court of Columbia county that the overseers of the poor of Bloomsburg were about six thousand dollars in debt over and above all taxes assessed, after which the Judge ordered a special assessment to be made, which was so onerous to the people that the live men of the town immediately took steps to curtail the enormous expenditures, which were adopted, by the purchase of a farm outside of the borough limits, and the house was remodeled to serve its purposes. When the building was ready, notice was given that all persons dependent upon the overseers for their maintenance were required to go the Almshouse. Notwithstanding at that time there were twenty-four persons receiving alms from the public, there were only two persons willing to go to the almshouse. The Judge stated that since that time the farm had been self sustaining, and that there were no poor taxes assessed in Bloomsburg.

The poor fund of Bellefonte is very nearly, if not quite, in as bad condition as it was in Bloomsburg at the time the Court was appealed to. If Major Bayard can extricate it from its present indebtedness without an increase of taxes, he will bestow an incalculable blessing upon the tax-payers who will, no doubt, appreciate his efforts by endorsing his actions and cheering him on in his good work.

One of the happy events at this time is the revival of business which will afford employment to all those who are able to work, so that none but the aged and infirm will be asking alms at the hands of their fellow citizens for a long time to come.

THE Democrats carry Ohio every day now—on paper. The Republicans will carry it soon by votes.

WASHINGTON.

Special Correspondent.

Sept. 29, 1879.

The Democrats of South Carolina are evidently alarmed at the determination of the Republicans to revive and prosecute a live canvass next year, and have applied the screws thus early to keep them down. In all parts of the State acts of terrorism have been committed. The affair at Blackville is but a sample of what may be expected for the next few months in the line of "discipline." At that place, a colored man, named Frederick Nix, is postmaster, and the officials here say he is a faithful one. But he is also an influential Republican, and took a conspicuous part in bringing the Ku Klux and Red Shirt men before the Federal courts last winter. He is making arrangements to re-organize his party. For these "offences" the "leading citizens," friends of Hamburg Butler, laid a plan to assassinate him, and he was shot in the back, but not so seriously that he could not recognize his assailant, and demand his arrest and punishment. The local authorities, however, refused to arrest the assassin, and so he will go unpunished unless the United States authorities will take cognizance of the crime. These affairs will not escape the notice of the North as a part of the infamous methods by which the Democrats propose to complete their damnation in this nation.

In spite of the assurance of the Democrats to the contrary the colored exodus from the South still continues, and promises to be larger than ever shortly. Representative colored men have been here to look over the ground and obtain information as to the feeling of the Northern people touching their movements. They have been told by the bulldozers that the North and West do not want them and will not receive them, but they find the contrary to be the fact. They will be welcomed wherever they go. The reports from all parts where the colored people have emigrated, are to the effect that they are good citizens and faithful laborers, and more of them are wanted. It is probable that many of those to come from the Southeastern States will settle in the middle Northern States as far West as Indiana. After the movement is more generally organized the philanthropists of the North will contribute liberally to the expenses of those emigrants who are unable to help themselves.

The announcement that Gen. Grant had accepted the presidency of a company raised by European capitalists to dig a ship canal across the Isthmus was premature. The European capitalists have been trying to enlist Gen. Grant and other strong Americans in their enterprise in order to give it a good send off, but they have not yet succeeded, and it is not probable they will. But it is probable that the enterprise will not be abandoned. The more feasible plan is for an international combination to carry it forward and so make it an entirely neutral work, never to be interrupted as a commercial highway, even in war. Negotiations are now pending between our Government and that of Nicaragua for the right to construct such a canal, and they are likely to succeed. Gen. Grant may take a hand in the enterprise as president of an international company, but he will not take such position in any company controlled by European capital. Meanwhile it is important again to remind the readers that many eminent engineers do not believe in the practicability of the canal. Capt. Eads is one of that number, and he is going to push his scheme against it of constructing a marine railway for carrying ships across the isthmus. He believes his scheme the only practicable one, and certainly the cheapest one, and there are many who agree with him, among whom is Gen. Grant, who is his warm friend.

Address of Leonard Rhone.

The following address was delivered by Leonard Rhone, Master of Pomona Grange, at the Grangers' picnic held on Thursday of last week:—

Fellow Patrons and Citizens.—I can but feel grateful for the high honor conferred upon me in being selected to make the opening address at this sixth great annual gathering of Patrons of Husbandry of Centre county.

I appreciate this expression of regard the more highly from the fact that it comes from the farming class of our county. I am glad that there are so many present on this re-union occasion of the Patrons of Husbandry. I am glad of the opportunity to meet once more, face to face with the Patrons of Centre, Mifflin and Clinton counties, and to express my gratitude for the unvarying kindness and generous feelings they have ever manifested toward me.

It is with sincere pleasure that I perform the duty that has been assigned me on this occasion as Master of the Centre County Pomona Grange; to tender to you all, Patrons, farmers, mechanics, laborers, and those of every calling and purpose who have the magnanimity of heart and nobleness of mind to say God speed to our beloved order, a hearty greeting, and cordially bid you welcome to our sixth annual gathering, which has been cast upon this grand and pleasant summit of Nittany mountain, a spur at the base of the Alleghanies from where as if in forgetfulness they lingered in fascination, taking a final look as it were at the grand and beautiful Pennsvalley which spreads out so charmingly below the Alleghanies roll up tier after tier to their crest, till they appear like ocean waves and storms petrified. I welcome you from the Westbranch of the Susquehanna. I welcome you from the vallies of the Juniatta and the Kishacoquillas. I welcome you from the mountains and from the rivers and the streams who have come up hither to celebrate our annual autumnal gathering and "Harvest Home." I invite you all to freely participate in the rich and unalloyed enjoyment of the day.

We have met together to-day from all parts of our county and from adjoining counties for the purpose of extending to one another friendly greetings, and if possible to more firmly unite and fraternize the elements of agricultural life; to foster and cement more strongly by a mutual understanding the great principles of the order of Patrons of Husbandry.

A more fitting time for the Patrons reunion could not have been chosen, it being at the closing days of the summer, days of comparative leisure to the farmer. It is but natural for him to join his fellow laborers with their families for a day of festivities and general enjoyment.

A rural gathering for pleasure like this, away from the decorations of artistic splendor in the City Hall, or the fashionable places of the rich sheltered only by the green foliage of the forests of the surrounding hills which are turning into the sear leaf; the fresh odors of an entire landscape coming to us on every passing breeze, and above all as far as the eye can reach, well built homes and cultivated fields; the rewards of rural industry; such plainness, such natural and unfeigned simplicity—such gushing impulses of rural friendship while partaking of their bounteous repast are in harmony with the best impulses of our nature; who could here refrain from participating or sharing the refreshing influences of such a gathering or reunion of the rural districts?

What scene more dignified or delightful than to see as we have here hundreds of happy, intelligent farmers collected from all parts of our county and counties; not to engage in political or party strife, but meet together for their country's good, consulting how best to promote and fraternize in bonds of union the once distracted and divided agricultural class of our country, with no warring elements, no heart burnings of any sort, but peace and good will animating every bosom; bringing into social and profitable intercourse those who would otherwise have remained strangers and estranged to one another. Mr. President, should not such scenes be well calculated to gladden the heart of every wise and good citizen of our government? But, if you please go back with me only twelve years to the time before the establishment of the order of Patrons of Husbandry in the county, what a contrast you will find among the agricultural class then and now; the farmers were divided and indifferent to one another and had no such gatherings as the Patrons have held in our county for the last five or six years, and as we find here to-day; they were then divided and under the entire control of politicians and demagogues who periodically tramp like, traveling the country in the interest of political parties to stir up strife in the rural districts upon issues that were merely partizan in character and ruinous to the agricultural class and to the country.

It was partizan politics that plunged our country into civil war. It is partizan politics that prevents the return of peace, prosperity and confidence to our country. It is partizan politics that keeps up the unprofitable agitation of state sovereignty which is of no interest to the farming or the industrial classes. It was partizan politics that forced the premature resumption of specie payment to the irreparable injury of the farming and producing classes. It is partizan politics that wants an unlimited paper currency, which would be of no lasting benefit to the farming and industrial classes of our country. It was partizan politics that prevented the farming class from organizing in the past, to their almost irreparable injury and ruin. Gentlemen, we understand the issues that are kept before the people for partizan purposes; they are of no interest to the agricultural class or for the good of our country. You can continue to trot out all the hoodlums of the drinking saloons and gambling hells to the primary elections for the sole purpose of keeping out the intelligent farmers, mechanics and laborers; but, sirs, you cannot bind us by your actions at the polls. We give you fair warning that the intelligent farmer will not vote with any party that will not recognize and honor the farming class, which forms one-half of our country. We ask no special favors excepting those that our numbers and intelligence entitle us to. We want the agricultural class, that composes 25,000,000 of the people of our country, represented; we want an economical and just administration of the laws; we want peace and prosperity for our country.

The farmers, as American citizens, are tired of your State sovereignty, specie payments and unlimited paper currency. We want a united people; we want a currency that will be of equal advantage to the farmer and money-lender, that will build up the industry of our country.

The Grange is not a political party; it puts no candidate in the field; as such, its principles are as high above partizan politics as the brilliancy of the sun is above that of the stars.

The Grange is not political, yet the principles we teach underlie all true politics, all true statesmanship. The educating principles of the Grange have already commenced their work among the people. The farmer no longer cares for the Democratic, Republican or any other parties as partizans. We ask no special favors of any political organization, but we demand what is ours by birth, by right and by the honors that should be ours.

Self-protection, to say nothing of the honors of the farming class, demands that the farmers receive an equal proportion of the positions of honor and trust in our government according to our proportion of the population.

The farmer has learned through the instrumentality of the Grange that it is not the farming class in the South or the farming class in the North that keeps up the bitter sectional strife in our country; but that it is kept up by demagogues, idlers and hoodlums of corrupt political rings for partizan purposes.

The National Grange of the Patrons of Husbandry has met in southern and northern cities, welcomed alike and unmolested in the expression of our opinions, the farmers receiving one another in fraternal greetings as brothers and sisters, pledging each other at the altar of our beloved order fidelity and friendship as long as time shall last.

I welcome these aged men and women before me, who have journeyed up hither, as it were, to make their last offering upon the altar of our Order and to perform the last great rites of honor and blessing upon those of us who are younger in years. I feel just like going down there among you and learning lessons of wisdom from your trials and tribulations, and to pledge to you our fidelity and devotion to our beloved Order. O! we appreciate your solicitude and nobleness of character, of yet in your old age having the opportunity of witnessing the consummation of your long wished-for alliance and union of our people. Poets may sing and historians write of deeds of valor and heroism, but yours will out-live them all and will be appreciated by future posterity and will permeate all the ramifications of society down until the last cycle of time. I welcome the young people—the boys and girls who are the hope of our Order. The places of those aged people that I just spoke of, in the Grange, you will soon be called upon to occupy. If we get the young people into the Grange we will soon have all the old people—don't you see it? they will be the old people after a little while. We have forms and ceremonies entirely suited to your tastes, and you would be delighted with them. Then the Grange also opens the way for you to honor, to positions and to usefulness in society. The destiny of our Order and our country is soon to be placed in your hands. This material must be had to build up and perpetuate the Grange edifice.

In the language of the Master of the National Grange, "let us firmly resolve that all geographical discriminations be forever ignored; that there be no Mason & Dixon's line; no sectional or special privileges within our doors or within our country. Devoted to the interests of a common cause, let us meet upon a common level and act in perpetual unity, ever striving, through the education of the masses, for the permanent establishment of our Order and the perpetuity of a common government, to the end that we may become a united prosperous, free and happy people, down to the latest syllable of recorded time."

"We live in deeds, not years; in thoughts, not breaths;
In feelings, not in figures on a dial;
We should count time by heart throbs when they beat;
For God, for man, for duty.
He most lives who thinks most—feels noblest—acts the best."

The London correspondent of a Liverpool paper says: "The papers announced yesterday that, owing to an accident in the machine room, the extra double number of the Illustrated London News, advertised to appear this morning, would be unavoidably postponed until to-morrow. As a matter of fact, the 'accident' was a literary, not a mechanical one, the proprietor cancelling several thousands of printed copies rather than allow the publication of an article by one of his editors, reflecting, as he conceived, with ill-timed severity and offensiveness on the family of the Prince Imperial. Instantly, on reading the article, Mr. Ingram ordered 'stop press,' sacrificing $10,000 to this delicacy of feeling."

ARE THE CHILDREN HOME?

Each day, when the glow of sunset
Fades in the western sky,
And the wee ones, tired of playing
Go tripping lightly by,
I steal away from my husband,
Asleep in his easy chair,
And watch from the open doorway
Their faces fresh and fair.

Alone in that dear old homestead
That once was full of life,
Ringing with girlish laughter,
Echoing boyish strife,
We two are waiting together;
And oft, as the shadows come,
With tremulous voice he calls me,
"It is night! are the children home?"

"Yes, love," I answer him gently,
"They're all home long ago."
And I sing, in my quivering treble,
A song so soft and low,
Till the old man drops to slumber,
With his head upon his hand,
And I tell to myself the number,
At home in a better land.

Home, where never a sorrow
Shall dim their eyes with tears,
Where the smile of God is on them
Through all the summer years—
I know, yet my arms are empty,
That fondly folded seven
And the mother heart within me
Is almost starved for heaven.

Sometimes, in the dusk of evening,
I only shut my eyes,
And the children are all about me,
A vision from the skies;
The babe whose dimpled fingers
Lost the way to my breast,
And the beautiful ones, the angels,
Passed to the world of the blest.

A breath and the vision is lifted
Away on wings of light,
And we two are together,
All alone in the night.
They tell me his mind is failing,
But I smile at idle fears;
He is only back with the children,
In the dear and peaceful years.

And still as the summer sunset
Fades away in the west,
And the wee ones, tired of playing,
Go trooping home to rest,
My husband calls from his corner,
"Say, love! have the children come?"
And I answer, with eyes uplifted,
"Yes, dear! they are all at home."

Our Story Teller.

"A Flat."

A STORY OF COLLEGE LIFE.

Arthur Hoyt looked at himself in the glass curiously, and without self-love or self-prejudice. He saw there a frank, good natured face, a pair of blue eyes and a mass of curly brown hair. As far as he could judge there was nothing particularly out of the way with his countenance.

"Say, Dick," he began, to his roommate, who was puzzling over a page of Xenophon, "I've been taking account of stock, and I don't see anything unpardonable wrong about my features. They are not angular enough to be justly called flat; so I can't exactly see the suitableness of the expression which has somehow come to be my college cognomen."

"Don't be a fool," growled Dick, without looking up from his book.

"I've always been a great stickler for the fitness of things, eternal and temporal," continued Arthur, "and if to be a flat is really applicable as a correct description of the impression my personal appearance makes on my companions, all right! I'd as soon respond to that name as any other; but if i s not mine, then, old fellow, its got to be stopped!"

"If you rob hen roosts, and steal the housekeeper's preserves, and lay traps to trip up old men and women, and raise Cain generally, you'd be the most popular fellow in college," said Dick, with a disdainful grimace, still with his eyes fixed on his book. "They let me alone, you see, because I don't care a hang for 'em, and because they know I'm as poor as poverty and as dull as a hard-shell clam. You get ahead of 'em in class. I'm always in the rear. You have money to subscribe to everything that is going, and you refuse to spend it in riotous living. I haven't any money, and, therefore, I'm of no consequence. Whoever says that there isn't compensation for everything don't know what he's talking about."

"You're a patient old soldier," said Arthur, with a merry laugh, "and I wish I had some of your philosophy! But, the fact is, every time I'm called 'a flat,' I feel the fight tingling all over me. I am afraid that some time my fits will become unmanageable."

"I guess not!" Dick replied. "You'd only get yourself in a worse mess, besides having something to be sorry for all the days of your life, perhaps! But there's the bell, and I'm all out of the bolt-ropes, as usual."

"But there's a row in camp!" said Arthur's right hand neighbor, as the young men took their seats in class. "Some of the boys scared old Mrs. Allen into a fit last night, and they say its a 'liner.' Nobody thinks she'll pull through. One of the fellows dressed up in white, and rode the old woman's cow clear into the kitchen. They let out the pig, and goodness knows what they didn't do. There won't be any show for the boys that cut up those capers."

"Well, there oughtn't to be!" said Arthur, indignantly.

Just then the Greek professor entered the class-room, and, after surveying the students a moment, said, with great seriousness:

"I am requested by the President to say to Arthur Hoyt and Richard Denham that they are to repair at once to the library, where the faculty of this college wait to see them."

"All right, sir," responded Arthur, pleasantly. Conscious integrity made him bold. Dick arose slowly, and walked out in his usual dogged manner.

"Say, 'a flat,' you're in for it!" said one of the class, in a low tone, as the young man passed him.

"Your turn has come now, 'a flat!'" said another. "Mebbe you won't be so high and mighty now you're found out at last!"

"What do you suppose it is?" Dick inquired, as e came up with Arthur.

"Some contemptible trick of the boys," said Arthur; "but we shall soon know. Brace up, old fellow, for here we are."

A few words sufficed to put the visitors in possession of all they wanted to know. After a few preliminary remarks, such as having been led to expect better from the young men before him, the President produced a silk handkerchief, with "Arthur Hoyt" plainly marked in one corner.

"Does this belong to you, Hoyt?" the President inquired.

"It does, sir," replied Arthur, pleasantly.

"And is this yours?" the gentleman asked of Dick, presenting a crooked stick or cane, which the young man was accustomed to carry on long walks.

"That's mine, sir," said Dick.

"And here is a cuff with 'A Hoyt' marked on it," the President continued, "torn from the wrist, probably, in the pleasant excitement of frightening an innocent old woman into a fit. I hall be compelled to hold your property, sirs, until such time as the law of the college or the law of the State shall be passed upon you. Mrs. Allen is not expected to live."

"I am very sorry, sir," said Arthur, respectfully; "and I am sure Dick is, too; but what sort of justice is this that takes our guilt so entirely for granted? Your evidence is simply circumstantial, sir, and I wish to say here that I was never on Mrs. Allen's premises in my life, and I am quite sure Denham never was."

"I never was," said Dick, with characteristic doggedness, "and I never expect to be."

"What would you say, Hoyt, if I were to tell you that one of the professors saw you there last night?" inquired the president.

"I should say, sir," Arthur responded quickly, "that the professor was greatly mistaken; but if you were to tell me that one of the students saw me there, I should say that student lied."

There was a straightforwardness in the attitude of these suspected young men that was irresistible, still everything was against them. The old woman had testified that morning that she heard the name of Hoyt and Denham pronounced more than once the night before. The conspiracy was well arranged, nothing so far as known, having been left out in its calculation. Arthur was in his room alone all the previous evening, but, as he thought it over, there was absolutely no one to testify to this fact. Dick had taken one of his long walks into the country, returning at 10 o'clock. There was no way of proving this, either, for Dick had not spoken to a soul, and there was literally no way by which he could prove a alibi. Nothing more could be said at present, and Arthur and his chum withdrew and passed slowly along to their room, as the president had ordered. On their way they met several students, who, it was plain to be seen, were waiting for them to leave the library.

"You can't most always tell a flat from a sharp," said one of the number, a young man who had been particularly offensive in his manner to Arthur. "We have all been mistaken in your character, my boy. I take notice that when these goody-goody fellows do take it into their soft pates to cut up, they generally beat the rest of us all hollow in the meanness of their efforts."

Arthur's face was scarlet, and his hands worked nervously. He was full of desire to knock this fellow down, and, under the exasperating circumstances, it was hardly to be wondered at; but the young man had been trained in a different school, so he valiantly turned on his heel and left his enemy without a word. "Valiantly" is the proper term to describe Arthur Hoyt's behavior in this crisis. It would have been physical strength only—and Arthur had plenty of that—to have flogged Steve Cary, the young man who had just publicly insulted him, but it required real valor to turn away without either word or blow. That afternoon the tidings of the death of Mrs. Allen threw the college into terrible excitement. Officers were promptly on hand, and Arthur and Dick were subject to the most rigid scrutiny. The coroner's jury would convene the next morning, and until then, at any rate, the two young men were prisoners. The detective who had charge of them was a good natured fellow, and, after asking all sorts of questions, relevant and irrevelant, as it seemed to his companions, he finally said with a chuckle:

"They may be pretty smart up here in the college, but they've got the wrong pigs by the ears this time. Say, boys, come out for a walk! I can keep an eye on you just as well out doors as in the house, and mebbe it'll chirp you up a bit."

So out they went, the detective asking all sorts of questions, it seemed to his companions for no other purpose than to make conversation. As they drew near the lake, a large and very deep sheet of water, Arthur saw that Cary was out in his—Arthur's—tiny, shallow shell of a boat.

"He'll have to be more careful, or he'll upset, as sure as fate!" said Arthur, more to himself than those about him.

"'Twould be a pity to have him drowned now!" growled Dick. "Great heavens! there he goes!"

Arthur, who had been watching the boat and its occupant, threw off his coat and his boots, and, before the detective could lay a hand on him, he had plunged into the water, and was making with all his might for the drowning man. Cary could not swim, and when Arthur reached him he had come to the surface the second time. It required almost superhuman strength to bring him in, but the brave swimmer succeeded, and for a moment Arthur lay, panting and exhausted, beside the inanimated form he had snatched from the water. A half hour later, the still-unconscious young man was borne to the college. Arthur, forgetting that he was a prisoner, did all in his power toward his enemy's restoration. As they removed his coat, a large Russia leather pocketbook dropped to the floor, and this Arthur took into his possession.

"You had better change your clothes at once, Hoyt," a kind voice said, after all had been done. Arthur turned, and saw the president."

"All right, sir," said the young man, presenting Cary's pocketbook. I was afraid this might fall into improper hands, sir. It seems very full of papers."

"I hope I haven't wronged you," said the president with considerable feeling.

"Rather hope you have, sir," said Arthur, with a smile; "if you have wronged us, then we are innocent, you know; but whatever the result, I shall always feel that you have acted according to your best judgment."

That evening, as Arthur, Dick and the detective sat in their room, waiting for they knew not what, a knock on the door was followed by the entrance of the president.

"Officer," he said, with trembling voice, "you can go to the parlor, if you please. These young men are not guilty, therefore they require no guard."

"I knew that afore," said the detective, as he hastily left the room.

"The pocketbook you gave me, Arthur," the president began, "has solved the mystery. There was but one student engaged in that miserable affair, and he has passed to his account," he continued reverently.

"He was joined by some young men from the city—what young men we shall probably never find out. I should have been more careful, boys," and now the tears rolled down the good man's face. "I have cleared your name before the whole college, and that is all I can do. Even with poor Cary dead upstairs, your friends and your enemies joined in a hearty cheer of good-will when I told them what I thought necessary."

Somehow it came to pass from that day till the day Arthur Hoyt left college he was never again called "A flat."

Smitten with the Circus Fever.

Last evening after the performance was over at the circus a young man called on Chiarini and he said he wanted to see him on private business. The old veteran took him into his office and received him with his usual politeness.

"I came up all the way from Carson to see the show, and I'd like to join," said the young man.

"Oh, I see," said the circus man; "you are a well-formed, healthy-looking young fellow, and I like to encourage such a you." The youth's eyes brightened.

"You do not chew, smoke or drink, I hope?"

"Oh, no, honor bright—except soda and beer."

"You must leave off these bad habits. They weaken the muscles and paralyze the nerves. You can stop drinking, but your salary will not be large till you overcome these tendencies. A little lemonade—circus lemonade—is all the performers drink. Call at eleven o'clock tomorrow morning, and I will see what you can do. You mustn't expect over fifty dollars a week though at first. We never pay high salaries until we know just what a man can do."

The delighted Carsonite went away and this morning was on hand.

Chiarni took him to a tent where three immense Bengal tigers were caged. Handing him a currycomb and a pair of shears he remarked:

"Your duties will be comparatively light at first. You will go into the cage and curry the tigers down every morning, and about once a week cut their claws; keep 'em down pretty short, so that when they attack the tiger tamer, Wilson, they won't lacerate him very much. Sometimes, but not more than once a month, you will have occasion to file their teeth. You just throw the animal on his back and hold his teeth between your knees. If he acts rough belt him in the nose a few times. Keep belting him until he quiets down."

"Haven't you got a vacancy in the art department?" asked the young man from Carson.

"Is art in your line?" inquired Chiarini.

"Yes," drawled the young man. "In the circuses I've run with I was always employed to paint the stripes on the zebras. I killed so many tigers keepin' 'em straight that the boss wouldn't let me handle 'em. He said I used 'em too rough."

Chiarini swears that the terror from Carson shall have the first vacancy.

When you observe a female making for the river with her sleeves rolled up, a good sized birch sprout in her hand and a wrinkle across her nose, you needn't think she's going a fishing. Not much; she's got a boy down that way, who promised her with tears in her eyes that he wouldn't go in swimming.

Sir Walter Scott, Bart.

BY ESTHER P. TUTEN.

"Who is there that, looking back over a great portion of his life, does not find the genius of Scott administering to his pleasures, beguiling his cares, and soothing his lonely sorrows?" What a multitude of pictures his very name calls up! For he was a rare artist, whatever his subject. Listen to this description of moonlit ruins:—

If thou would'st view fair Melrose aright
Go visit by the pale moonlight;
For the gay beams of lightsome day
Gild but to flout the ruins gray.
When broken arches are black in night,
And each shafted oriel glimmers white;
When the cold lights uncertain show'r
Streaming on the ruined central tower;
When buttress and buttress alternately,
Seem framed of ebon and ivory;
When silver edges the imagery,
And the scrolls that teach thee to live and die;
When distant Tweed is heard to rave,
And the owl to hoot o'er the dead man's grave;
Then go,—but go alone the while—
Then view St. David's ruined pile;
And home returning, soothly sware
Was never scene so sad and fair.

But this is only one among myriads. His pictures, however, are not all painted by moonlight. "No poet was ever a finer colorist; his landscapes abound in light and shade, and the color is always true. He was the first to open to the delight of the world the wild scenery of the Highlands and moors. He touched all with a pencil so light, graceful and true that the very names are made romantic. But ruins and landscapes are not all he has painted: how many life like portraits he has drawn! Into how many homes he has introduced us! How affecting is the tale of the unhappy countess! How exquisite is the grouping and contrast of Isaac, the kind but sordid Jew, and his heroic Rebecca; of the reserved but ardent Mannering, and the flighty coquette, Julia!"

But Scott's aim is not simply to please; his novels "are not merely love stories, but pictures of human life, animated by sentiments which are cheerful and correct; and they exhibit history in a most effective light, without degrading facts or falsifying them beyond the lawful stretch of poetic embellishment."

"For well he knew the various modes of ancient times,
Their arts and fashions of each various guise;
Their weddings, funerals, punishments of crimes;
Their strength, their learning, lore, and rarities."

Border story and romance were the study and passion of his whole life. "Show him an old castle, or a field of battle, and he was at home at once, filled it with its combatants in their proper costumes, and overwhelmed his hearers by the enthusiasm of his descriptions."

Without doubt we owe much of the pleasure derived from Scott's works to the fact of his childhood being spent in the picturesque region of Kelso, where was poetic impulse given

By the green hill and clear blue heaven, and where his lonely hours were cheered by many a tale of "merry men all of the persuasion of Robin Hood and Little John." How well he worked these legends into his romantic poems is shown by their popularity—for ten years he continued to pour forth poem after poem, and it was not until the bright sun of Byron's genius rose above the horizon that the light of this star was in any sense eclipsed.

'Twas a favorite saying of Scott's that

"The mouse who only trusts to one poor hole
Can never be a mouse of any soul;"

"So as the old mine gave symptoms of exhaustion, the new mine, ten times more effective, at least in the precious metals, was discovered, and just as in Rohely and Triermain the Genius of the Ring seemed to flag in its powers, came the more potent Genius of the Lamp in the shape of Waverly." The working of this new mine was a great pleasure, and often the interest he felt in his own creations was so great that his delight in developing their humors and adventures left him no space for the elaboration of an intrigue. In commenting on his own way of writing, Scott says: "I have begun the third volume of Woodstock this morning. Now I have not the slightest idea how the story is to be wound up to a catastrophe. I am in just the same case as I used to be when I lost myself in former days in some country to which I was a stranger. I always pushed for the pleasantest route, and either found or made it the nearest. It is the same in writing; I never could lay down a plan. I only tried to make that which I was actually writing diverting and interesting, leaving the rest to fate." Verse he always rewrote twice and often three times, but prose he seldom saw after the first writing until the proof-sheets were sent to him for correction. On this account, the style of his novels is often careless, but if, as he believed, too much thought crippled his imagination, we would rather they should be thus faulty than that his fancy should have been less free. The description of King Rene, which Scott gives in one of his last works, is so applicable to himself that we cannot forbear quoting it:

"A manful man he was; the snows of age
Fell, but they did not chill him. Gaiety,
Even in life's closing touched his teeming brain
With such wild visions as the setting sun
Raises in front of some hoar glacier,
Painting the bleak ice with a thousand hues."

What a pleasure it would have been to have been one of the thousand and one persons who, for reasons as various as the people themselves, made it in their way to spend a day or two at Abbotsford, or, greater pleasure still, to have been one of the constant inmates of that "romance in stone and lime"! What stories could those walls not tell!—stories of mirth and gladness, stories of fear and sadness, for in common with all mankind, the baronet of Abbotsford had both good and evil fortune; and we cannot regret that the evil was mingled with the good, for had he not known adversity we should never have known the true nobility of his character, but now we can say with Gladstone, "He died a great man, and what is more, a good man. He has left us a double treasure—the memory of himself and the possession of his works. Both of them will endure."

"Call it not vain: they do no err
Who say that when a poet dies
Mute nature mourns her worshiper,
And celebrates his obsequies;
Who say tall cliff and cavern lone
For the departed bard make moan;
That mountains weep in crystal rill,
That flowers in tears of balm distil;
Through his loved groves that breezes sigh,
And oaks in deeper groans reply;
And rivers teach their rushing wave
To murmur dirges round his grave."

The State Fair Trick.

Soon after breakfast, yesterday morning a negro who was crossing the Campus Martius was halted by a run-down white man with a bad kink in his left eye, and asked if he intended to visit the State Fair during the week.

"Yes, sah—Ize gwine up dar at least fo' times," was the reply.

"Boy, are you up to snuff?" whispered the stranger.

"Well, sah, I knows a trick or two."

"Good—I thought you did. Now then, I want ten cents to get a drink, and I'll tell you how you can make your way through any of the gates without the least trouble."

"Wouldn't I be ketched?"

"Not a bit of it. I'll warrant you go through without a word, and I only want ten cents for telling you how. I wouldn't give it away to any body but a sharp, keen man like you."

"Well, I'll take dat in," said the negro, as he handed over a dime. "Now, den, how kin I pass de gates?"

The white man put his mouth close to the other's ear and replied:

"Pay 'em fifty cents!"

It would have been a pretty even fight, but an officer came along and squelched it in the blossom.

The Longest Beard in the World.

Our correspondent in Norwich, Conn., writes that there is a man in that city who probably wear the longest beard of any man in the world. His name is Henry C. Cook, a tailor by trade. He never makes a display of his beard, but wears it concealed in a little bag under his shirt bosom. The beard is six feet six inches in length, and, when allowed to fall its length, it will reach to his toes and stretch out on the floor ten inches, and looks like a large skein of brown silk. It was six inches longer than at present, but a short time ago he trimmed it off to its present length. Mr. Cook says it has been growing about 21 years. A year ago P. T. Barnum called on him and tried to induce him to travel with his show, but Mr. Cook's modesty and the desire of his wife that he should not accept Barnum's liberal offer, induced him to reject it. In speaking of Cook in connection with the man with a long beard in Michigan, Barnum said Cook's was by far longest and finest of the two. Mr. Cook often shows his beard to visitors, but is not in the habit of making a great parade over it. The truth of these statements can be substantiated by calling on him at his place of business.—Boston Herald.

Nevada girls are fleet of foot and lively withal. The Plumas National narrates that one night, about three weeks ago, the dog of a hunter named Swan started a deer near the house, which is located in Granite Basin. Swan was up and at it in a moment, and a little later his two daughters joined the chase in their night robes. The Dianas, in costumes as picturesque as those in which the mythic goddess herself figures, ran up the mountain side ahead of their father. When they closed upon the buck he was at bay, with the dogs loud-mouthed around him. Miss Sallie, the youngest of the girls, did not hesitate, but, being unarmed, seized the buck by the hind legs and held him until her father arrived. All the miners in the country now sing the praises of "Sallie Swan of Granite."

The Directors of the South Carolina penitentiary are considering the terrible death rate among convicts hired out. Of two hundred and twenty-five men hired to the Greenwood and Augusta railroad, nearly one hundred have died.

The steamship Westphalia, from Europe, brought to New York last week 9,700,000 francs, and 1,043,000 reichmarks.

Funeral Reforms.

It is a pleasure to note the prevailing sentiment of the present day in favor of reforms at funerals. In all the lessons of practical economy—forced upon us through recent business depression—we have been recreant to our teachings when all the solemnity of a funeral occasion presents itself. Therefore, we cheerfully join in the attempt to check the tendency of the day to run into unnecessary displays of costly burial caskets, of long lines and liveried stock for the accommodation of a host of friends and acquaintances, who not unfrequently attend more for the pleasures of a free ride to the cemetery than out of respect for the departed. Costly and ostentatious floral display is also another not less attendant evil. No one will deny that there is too much pompous show at our funerals that is disrespectful to the memory of the dead; even when indulged in by those whose circumstances will permit of such solemn pomposity. But when this unnecessary expenditure of money is so extravagantly indulged in by those of limited means it is about time and proper that there should be a radical change in funeral custom.

It may be all very well to say "Respect the dead," but we would, in all sincerity, ask whether pompous parade, embellished casket, flowing drapery and costly flowers, are the only sources through which we can appropriately respect the dead. We believe in all the solemn rites that are given to us by tradition, but when we are drifted into the channels of extravagance we render ourselves culpable to the insinuation that we are "putting on style." The hour of bereavement is the saddest in live. It is then that our thoughts should drift from that which will attract the curious gaze of those not relatively connected with the bereavement. Our grief should not bear curiosity seeking; which is invariably the case when all the toggery of unlimited expenditure accompanies the procession to the silent tomb. Reform in this direction is urgent without delay. It is easy of accomplishment if some one in good circumstances will only set a sensible example. As custom makes law, reform will follow with all its sensible suggestions and practical fulfillment.

But the lavish expenditure of money is not the only extravagance that is indulged in on these solemn occasions, for which the surviving relatives are alone responsible; there is another custom of extraordinary performance for which the officiating clergy are seriously to blame, viz: lengthly and high sounding funeral orations. They are all meant well enough; but not unfrequently, through a mistaken view of his duty, or ignorance, the officiating minister pitches his remarks in such a eulogistic and high toned train of thought that carries with it more mockery than panegyric for the dead. We do not desire to be understood as opposed to funeral discourses; but we are disposed to seriously question the eternal fitness of things when the minister transgresses beyond the limits of life traits and enters into a panegyric compared with which the oration of Antony over the dead body of Cæsar, or of Ingersoll over the grave of his brother, seem tame and trifling. Of course no untruth is intended; no violation of propriety; but, notwithstanding, such is the distasteful programme day after day.

If we were to stop and digest the language in these model funeral orations we would perforce conclude that bad men and women were long since banished from the world, and that none but the good remained. We do not advocate a rehearsal of a man's failings in life by the officiating minister. Even though a man was notoriously bad we would not advocate denunciation over the open grave; such a course would be as much out of proper place as fulsome eulogy. It would be better to observe discreet silence under all such circumstances. If it is undesirable to tell the truth about such a person, it is equally desirable not to err in the opposite direction by telling untruths.

Thus it will be seen that our efforts at reform should not be confined alone to the pecuniary features of the funerals, but also to the moral evil of hollow mockery by the officiating clergy. All sensible persons will agree that our article is not ill-advised; then why not eliminate from customs that seem more barbarous than respectful to our departed dead? We can if we will; but will we?—Farmers Friend.

The English Queen, in an exhortation to English ladies on the importance of a knowledge of housekeeping, speaks of Americans, saying: "No one can deny that, as a rule, they are 'pleasant to the eyes,' and certainly do not usually sin in the way of neglecting their personal adornment or in taking their full share in the pleasures and daintinesses of this life; yet, when the necessity arises, we have the warrant of those who have traveled and lived in America for believing that they can hold their own as useful members of the households of which they are also the ornaments."

A young woman of Staten Island, named Jessie Bailey, is trying to have the marriage of the King of Spain with the Archduchess Christina put off on the ground that the King is engaged to her. But the poor young girl is crazy on the subject, like a great many others of her sex.

Card Playing.

A private soldier, by the name of Richard Lee, was taken before the magistrate of Glasgow, Scotland, for playing cards during divine service. The account is thus given in an English journal:

A sergeant commanded the soldiers at the church, and when the parson had read the prayers he took the text. Those who had Bibles took them out; but this soldier had neither Bible nor Common Prayer book, and, pulling out a pack of cards, he spread them before him. He first looked at one card and then at another. The sergeant of the company saw him and said:

"Richard, put up the cards; this is no place for them."

"Never mind that," said Richard.

When the services were over the constable took Richard prisoner, and brought him before the Mayor.

"Well," said the Mayor, "what have you brought the soldier here for?"

"For playing cards in church."

"Well, soldier, what have you to say for yourself?"

"Much, sir, I hope."

"Very good; if not, I will punish you severely."

"I have been," said the soldier, "about six weeks on the march. I have neither Bible nor Common Prayer Book. I ha e nothing but a pack of cards, and I hope to satisfy your worship of the purity of my intentions." Then, spreading the cards before the Mayor, he began with the ace: "When I see the ace, it reminds me that there is but one God. When I see the deuce, it reminds me of the Father and Son. When I see the trios, it reminds me of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost. When I see the four, it reminds me of the four Evangelists that preached, Matthew, Mark, Luke and John. When I see the five, it reminds me of the five virgins that trimmed their lamps; there were ten, but five were wise and five were foolish, and were shut out. When I see the six, it reminds me that in six days the Lord made heaven and earth. When I see the seventh, it reminds me that on the seventh day God rested from the great work he had made, and hallowed it. When I see the eight, it reminds me of the eight righteous persons who were saved when God destroyed the world, viz: Noah and his wife, his three sons and their wives. When I see the nine, it reminds me of the nine lepers that were cleansed by our Saviour. There were nine out of the ten that never returned thanks. When I see the ten, it reminds me of the Ten Commandments which God handed down to Moses on the tables of stone. When I see the king, it reminds me of the Great King of Heaven, which is God Almighty. When I see the queen, it reminds me of the Queen of Sheba, who visited Solomon, for she was as wise a woman as he was a man. She brought with her fifty boys and girls, all dressed in boys' apparel for King Solomon to tell which were boys and which were girls. The King sent for water for them to wash. The girls washed to the elbows, the boys to the wrist; so King Solomon told by that."

"Well," said the Mayor, "you have described every card in the pack except one."

"What is that?"

"The knave," said the Mayor.

"I will give your honor a description of that, too, if you will not get angry."

"I will not," said the Mayor, "if you do not figure me as the knave."

"The greatest knave that I know of is the constable that brought me here."

"I do not know," said the Mayor, "if he is the greatest knave, but I know he is the greatest fool."

"When I count how many spots there are in a pack of cards, I find 365 spots, as many days as there are in a year. When I count the number of cards, I find 52—the number of weeks in a year. I find that there are 12 picture cards in a pack, representing the number of months in a year, and on counting the tricks, I find 13—the number of weeks in a quarter. There are also four suits in a pack, which represent the number of seasons in a year. So, you see, a pack of cards serves for a Bible, an almanac, and a Common Prayer Book."

PATENTS

OBTAINED for Inventors, in the United States, Canada, and Europe, at reduced rates. With our principal Office located in Washington, directly opposite the United States Patent Office, we are able to attend to all Patent Business with greater promptness and despatch and less cost, than other patent attorneys, who are at a distance from Washington, and who have, therefore, to employ "associate attorneys." We make preliminary examinations and furnish opinions as to patentability, free of charge, and all who are interested in new inventions and Patents are invited to send for a copy of our "Guide for obtaining Patents," which is sent free to any address, and contains complete instructions how to obtain Patents and other valuable matter. We refer to the German-American National Bank, Washington, D. C.; the Royal Swedish, Norwegian, and Danish Legations, at Washington; Hon. Joseph Casey, late Chief Justice U. S. Court of Claims; to the Officials of the U. S. Patent Office, and to Senators and Members of Congress from every State

Republican County Convention.

The Republican voters throughout the county, will in the usual manner, elect three (3) delegates from each precinct on Saturday, Oct. 4th, to meet in convention at the Court House, in Bellefonte, on Tuesday Oct. 7th, at 2 o'clock p. m., for the purpose of nominating a Jury Commissioner and transacting such other business as may be brought before the convention.

Let the Republicans see that there is a full representation from all parts of the county and that representative men are sent as delegates.

JOHN I. RANKIN, Secr'y. JOHN B. LINN, Chairman.

Republican Ward Meetings.

The Republican voters of the NORTH WARD of Bellefonte borough, will meet at the Town Council Room, on Saturday evening, Oct. 4, 1879, at 7½ o'clock, P. M, for the purpose of electing three (3) delegates to attend the Republican County Convention, to be held on Tuesday, Oct. 7, at 2 o'clock P. M.

SOUTH WARD.—At the shop of J. H. McClure & Son.

WEST WARD.—In the Reading Room of the Bush House.

Pay Your Taxes.—Every voter must have paid a State or county tax within two years and one month before the election in November. It does not matter when the tax was assessed, so that it was paid within the prescribed limits. Pay your taxes on or before October 4th, 1876.

Additional Local Matters.

—Valentines & Co. are buying wheat. Call at their store on Allegheny street.

—For bargains we advise every person to go to Louis Doll's for boots and shoes.

—If you wish to vote this fall see that your taxes are paid before next Saturday.

—Penn Bigeny, of the Bush House, who has been off on a three weeks' furlough, is again at his post, and ready for business.

—Farmers will do well to call on Valentines & Co. before selling their wheat elsewhere. They pay the highest market price.

—The Huntingdon Monitor says a coon weighing one hundred pounds was shot in that locality recently. That must have been a "rare-coon."

—We will deem it a favor if our farmer friends will send us items in relation to farm matters, for publication. Anything in the nature of news will be thankfully received.

—Judge Clayton said to the jury, in charging them in the Delaware County Court, the trial being that of Wm. J. Crannan, who was indicted with approaching grand jurors with corrupt intent: "This is perhaps the most important case which has been brought before you this session, because the charge is one which involves the corrupting of public justice, and hence is of the utmost consequence to the community. In a country where everything depends upon the purity of the judicial tribunals, it is of vital moment that all that appertains to our courts of justice should be above suspicion." The jury disagreed. But be that as it may, there is one thing that everybody will agree upon, which is that Sechler & Co. keep one of the finest stores in Central Pennsylvania. The store is not only kept in first-class order, but the goods that you buy there are fresh and genuine. No shoddy goods can be found at this house.

—Go to Newman's, at the Eagle Clothing Hall, if you want goods dirt cheap. He has sold out his ready-made clothing department to a Philadelphia party, who will take possession on or about January 1st. In the meantime Newman will sell off his large stock of ready-made clothing at actual cost, including freightage. This is one of the finest opportunities ever offered to the people of this section to buy clothing cheap, and they will do well to avail themselves of it. It is not Mr. Newman's intention to leave Bellefonte, but will go into the dry goods business.

—Go where you will, search high and low, and you cannot find a better or cheaper place to purchase coverings for the feet than at the boot and shoe bazar of John Powers & Son Just walk into their store and look about you. Tons and tons of merchandise, for men, women, children and babes, piled up on all sides. They are first-class goods and are being sold at prices to suit the times. A larger stock to select from can be found at this house than any other establishment in the county. Call in this week, while visiting the fair, and get a fall outfit.

—Two young men from the College, Alex. Hamilton and Gilbert White, drove to Bellefonte on Saturday, and while here their horse took sick and came very near going up the spout, as the saying is. The services of one of Bellefonte's veterinary surgeons was obtained, who succeeded in relieving the distressed animal, which was also a great relief to the young men, who, it is said, were looking somewhat blue.

—Here is the Chinese mode of preserving grapes fresh: Cut a hole in a pumpkin, remove the seeds and pulp, and after filling with ripe fruit replace the cover. This is a simple arrangement, and our farmer friends and others who are desirous of preserving this fruit in its natural form should try it.

—Isaac Haupt is determined not to be beaten by any cigar manufacturer in the county, and now has in his employ a first-class workman from Pottsville, Mr. Wash. Reese, who has had years of experience, and knows just what the public demand. Try some of his work.

—Bond Valentine has the best thing out for cooking by steam. Prices ranging from $3.50 to $5. Some of the first families in town have them, and are much pleased with them. Call on him and he will tell you all about it. Big thing, sartin.

—House plants and other tender garden shrubbery left out of doors now is liable to be destroyed any night. Heavy frosts are reported all over the country.

—The scores of some of those who are practicing for the glass-ball match to-morrow are coming up. Big guns from out of the county who are going to shoot will be badly scared, if not beaten.

—George Taylor, of Boggs township, desires us to say he is not a candidate for jury commissioner, and will not accept the nomination upon any condition.

—A cow belonging to Dr. Kirk was run over by the cars on last Friday evening, near the round house, and so badly injured that she had to be shot.

—Miss Maggie Snowden, the music teacher, after a several month's tour through Michigan, has returned to take charge of her class.

—There'll be some mighty long faces at the conclusion of the glass-ball match on Thursday, at the Fair.

In publishing the proceedings of the late convention of charcoal iron manufacturers held in Philadelphia, a fortnight ago, the Philadelphia Times took upon itself to attribute the remarks of Gen Lapsley, of Alabama, as having been made by our fellow townsman, Robert Valentine, Esq., the head of the firm owning the Bellefonte Forges. Mr. Valentine informs us that he made no speech whatever, and the remarks quoted by the Times were made by Mr. Lapsley, and no other person. As Mr. Valentine is strictly a business man, as well as an ardent Republican, the allusion of the Times is a falsehood and a slander, which he does not appreciate, and we call upon that sheet to correct a statement that does injustice to our respected and estimable citizen.

THE Watchman cannot see any signs of good times coming. Let the editor of that journal adjust his spectacles and look over the items headed "Pennsylvania News," to be found in another column. There will be found the true signs of returning prosperity in Pennsylvania, and what is true of this State is also true of other States. But the fact is, the Watchman doesn't want to see any signs of good times coming.

THE editor of the Altoona Advance is blessed with a mighty powerful imagination. Hear him: "All the organs are again predicting the demise of the Greenback party. And yet every election shows an increased vote. Either the election returns or the organs lie." Or the editor of the Advance. "Every election shows an increased vote." Pray, when was the last increase?

RUSSIA, it is believed in Europe is about to make war upon some foreign nation in order to avert impending trouble at home. A general uprising of Nihilists is feared, and Russia's design is to draw attention away from the Home Government by a foreign war. Great unrest prevails.

THE effort of Tammany and Anti-Tammany to prevent cheating at the coming election will give the Republicans of New York a better opportunity than they have had for years to make their vote felt.

The New York Herald now claims an average daily circulation of 112,200 an increase over last year of about 10,000.

Pennsylvania News.

The Reviving Industries of the State.

The old Safe Harbor Iron Works will be stated up at any early day.

The Codorus furnace, near the county jail in York, will soon be in operation.

The Pittsburgh Forge and Iron Company is putting up a new steam hammer.

Most of the 125 men employed at the Pittsburgh Foundry are working overtime.

Donegal furnace, at Marietta, will furnish pig iron for the Lancaster rolling mill.

Many of the gangs are working on night turn at the Reading shops of the Reading road.

The wrench factory at Girard, Erie county, begins running three hours a day over time this week.

The Altoona Car Works are being rebuilt, and will be at work again in five or six weeks.

Evans & Co.'s chimney-house, Pittsburgh, has started another furnace to keep up with orders.

Five or six furnaces in and near Columbia that have been cold since 1873 will soon be put in blast.

The Duncannon anthracite furnace that has been idle for several years will soon be started up.

The Keystone Glass Works, Pittsburgh, are working eleven turns a week—the largest number ever known.

The Millvale, Etna and Glendon Rolling Mills, Pittsburgh, are working double turn in all departments.

The Laughlin Mill at Pittsburgh turned out 2862 kegs of nails last week—more than any other week since the mill has been in operation.

The blacksmith shop at the Renovo Works is running day and night, and the shops are now employing seven or eight hundred men instead of the usual compliment of six hundred.

The Rohrerstown mill, Lancaster county, after being idle for four years, will be started in about a week. The owner has enough orders to run the mill for nine months, and will employ about 150 hands.

The new rolling mill of the National Tube Works, at McKeysport, is expected to be in operation in four or five weeks. It will have a three-high universal mill, a continuous mill, as well as other new features.

The Lancaster Iron Works will soon be busy at work under their new management. Thirty or forty men have been busy day and night in getting them ready, and within a fortnight about two hundred men will be at work. The mill will start next week upon an order for the Lehigh Valley Railroad. Supplies of iron and coal are rapidly accumulating at the works, the pig iron already furnished being from the Conestoga furnace here, St. Charles and Donegal, the Susquehanna and the Car on furnace. The production of the works will be a general run of bar iron and railroad supplies, consisting of track bolts, spikes, fish plates, etc., and the blacksmith shop will be used in turning out a full line of car forgings. The new company will not have any use for the foundry and machine shop connected with the works, and they therefore offer them for rent.

ASKING HIGHER WAGES AND GETTING SOME.

The Keystone Mill, Pittsburgh, gave a voluntary increase of fifteen per cent. last week, and the Crane Iron Company, of Catasauqua, one of ten per cent.

The laborers at the Pittsburgh freight depots have asked for an advance of 22½ cents a day, or 20 per cent. over their present wages, which were simply $1.12½.

The puddlers of the Palo Alto Mills are out on a strike for an advance from $3.25 a day to $3.75 at the least, and better coal as well. About one hundred men are out, and the superintendent is waiting for orders from Philadelphia.

Two new puddling furnaces were fired at the American Iron Works of Jones & Laughlin, Pittsburgh, on Tuesday, and two more new ones were used for the first time on Tuesday. The finishers in these works got an advance of fifteen cents a day on Saturday, and the machinists, who got from $1.80 to $2.40 a day, are out on a strike for an advance of twenty-five cents a day. They had suffered four reductions in five years, and the firm offered two-thirds of what they demanded—16⅔ cents.

State News.

—The Knights of Pythias are to have a grand reunion in Philadelphia on the 5th of October.

—The sales and resales of petroleum at Oil City on Wednesday of last week amounted to 400,000 barrels.

—New Orleans Picayune: Was William Penn's pocket-handkerchief the original penwiper? Who nose?

—Benjamin S. Mann, a well known builder, formerly of Doylestown, is dead. He served as a captain of militia in the war of 1812.

—Dr. W. J. Langfitt, of Allegheny City while attending a patient troubled with diphtheria got some of the virus in a sore on his hand, and his life is despaired of.

—The first trial of Martin V. Turner for the murder of Mrs. Maria Waple cost Clearfield county $7,000, and the second one, which closed at Lock Haven last week, it is estimated will cost $9,000.

—John Disque, a Conemaugh man, was stabbed eleven times in the body and face in a row in a saloon in Johnstown on Saturday night. His assailants, Joseph and Robert Snurr, were arrested.

—Mr. W. F. Cummins, of Mifflin county, was shot through the head and instantly killed by stage coach robbers, near Nevada City, on the 2d inst. His remains were brought east and interred at Reedsville.

—John Squint, now serving a term in the Berks county prison for engaging in the riots of '77, has become one of the most expert carpet weavers in the institution. He is able to weave 15 yards of carpet in ten hours.

—Major General James Fleming, of Crawford county, has reached his eighty-fourth year. He entered the regular service in the war of 1812 as a corporal, and before the war ended had been promoted to the position of Major General.

—Stephen Boyd, aged nineteen, of Mill Creek, Huntingdon county, was enamored of Miss Nellie Bunn, aged sixteen, but she repulsed him. He made an unsuccessful attempt to outrage her and then hung himself to a tree. All this happened about a week ago.

—In Allentown as Mrs. Wagner was in the act of putting pared peaches in the bake-oven of Lewis Peters, a neighbor, for the purpose of drying them, her dress ignited from the intense heat of the oven, and before assistance arrived she burned almost to a crisp. There are no hopes of her recovery.

—Mr. Henry Miller, of Susquehanna township, Cambria county, is of the opinion that a calf, of which he is the unfortunate owner, is a mule in disguise. The animal kicked Mr. Miller on one of his legs, breaking both bones. The victim is between 65 and 70 years of age, and this is the first time he met with such a mishap at the legs of a calf.

—John Schall, of Potter county, was shot through both legs, at a deer lick not far from his home, the hunters having set the gun with a wire to the trigger, so that a passing deer would discharge it, and then left to take a nap in a neighboring barn. Schall dragged himself homeward until his wife heard his cries and assisted him into the house; it is thought he will recover.

—Maria Hammaker, who swore that she was the wife of William K. Miller, the Harrisburg fireman murdered by Sam Albright, has been arrested on the charge of perjury, preferred by Albright's brother. The cause of the arrest is not known, unless it be that the Albrights want to keep her from visiting their brother, who is in concealment and who is madly in love with the girl.

—In the Butler jail on Thursday night nine prisoners who had been sentenced to the penitentiary and were awaiting transportation revolted. They refused to enter their cells when commanded by the Deputy Sheriff. He drew his revolver, ordered the turnkey to do the same, and gave them just one minute to obey his orders. It took them about half of that time to obey.

—Rev. Reuben Loveland, Jr., of the Central Pennsylvania Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, died at his father's in Lamar, Clinton county, Pa., on Saturday morning last. He was a graduate of the Williamsport Dickinson Seminary; entered the conference on trial in March, 1876. Was ordained deacon by Bishop Ames at Lewisburg, March 31, 1878. He was a young man of unusual promise, but his career was short. He came to the closing scene with complete victory over his last enemy.

St. Nicholas for October.

The October number of St. Nicholas closes the sixth volume of the Magazine with an array of features hard to match in interest for the little folks.

Louisa M. Alcott contributes the opening story entitled "Jimmy's Cruise in the 'Pinafore,'" a charming narrative illustrated with fine portraits of characters in the "Children's Pinafore," which will delight every boy and girl who have heard of the famous operetta.

The Elevated Railroads of New York are described in a long article by Charles Barnard, and with it are given eight admirable pictures of various views along the lines of the three New York roads. The text and illustrations also show how the roads were constructed, and together furnish a capital and entertaining account of these wonderful "Railroads in the Air."

"Noah's Ark Ashore," is the title of another descriptive article which will be eagerly read by every boy and girl. It is a well-told narrative of a visit to a queer "Ark" on the Amazon river which a kind-hearted native had turned into an asylum for beasts and birds of various kinds. The story of this novel institution is very interesting indeed, and the illustrations superb. No finer pictures of animals have been printed of late years than the eight beautiful drawings which accompany this article.

Besides these there is a timely little paper telling all about the strange doings and mysteries of "Halloween," and illustrated with a lovely frontispiece; while a very "Curious Monastery" is shown in a full paged picture; and a fascinating "School in the Woods" is described by Maurice Thompson, the literary archer.

Of stories there is a capital budget beginning with the two serials "Eyebright" and "A Jolly Fellowship," which are both concluded in this number with "climax" installments. Then there is a lively fishing story—"Mr. Carothers' Secret," written by the author of "Dab Kinzer;" a pleasant fanciful tale by Moncure D. Conway, and a strong home story for girls called "What Kate Found in the Well." "An Educational Breakfast at the Peterkins'," a very comical affair, is told about by Miss Lucretia P. Hale; Mary E. Bradley contributes a fine poem called "Duke Leopold's Stone," for which Alfred Fredericks has drawn a beautiful illustration; and there are several funny pictures and verses scattered through the number, while the Departments at the end will look at least as inviting as ever to the young eyes that read them so carefully every month.

DO A FAVOR TO A SICK FRIEND.—If you have a friend suffering from any disorder of the Kidneys send them a package of Kidney-Wort, and you will make them happy. Its great tonic power is especially directed to these diseases, and it quickly relieves the distress and cures the disease. Have you tried it?

FACTS FOR DAIRYMEN.—It should be borne in mind by practical dairymen, that the Perfect Butter Color of Wells, Richardson & Co., Burlington, Vt., is the best obtainable in the world. It is absolutely pure and harmless, free from odor or flavor, cannot spoil in any weather, is in liquid form and ready for instant use, costs but little, and is of a uniform standard as to strength and intensity of hue. Use no other.

—Bob Adams, the genial clerk at the Logan House, has in his possession a great natural curiosity. It is a peach, grown in such a shape that it might be taken for a frog from one point of view, for a young chicken from another, and for almost anything else viewing it from different points. It would certainly be proper to call it "the great what is it." "Step up gentlemen, it will only cost you the small sum of five cents to see the greatest living curiosity. The only one in America."—Altoona Call.

George is five years old. His mother had undressed him for a bath before putting him to bed. As he stood before her he said, "Now, mama, I'm a kid." "Yes, dear," said she. "You know what kind of a kid I am, mama?" "No, darling." "Well, na-kid." His mother thinks that is good for a kid of his age.—Providence Press.

One of a party of six Highland District boys who are spending their vacation at Kennebunk, sent the following expressive letter: "We dug a woodchuck out of his hole; it was a skunk; we slept in the barn that night."—Boston Journal.

James Freeland, Collector of Internal Revenue in Brooklyn, was found dead in his bed last Wednesday morning, from paralysis of the heart. He was eighty years of age, and one of the founders of the Plymouth church.

At Corsicana., Mo., Monday, Jas. Hall, a farmer, and Amos Kelley, a lawyer, between whom there existed an old grudge, met in a store, and as Kelley was leaving it, Hall shot him in the back, killing him. Hall escaped.

A congress of persons interested in America opened at Brussels last week. The King of Belgium, and President Blanco, of Venezuela, were present. Several countries were represented.

The first application for gold under the recent circular of the Treasury Department, was from the National bank at Bellaire, O.

To the General Public.

Graham & Son are receiving daily fine samples of the celebrated Burt shoes, for fall and winter trade, also Gents' boots and shoes. These shoes have gained the reputation they justly deserve. At the Paris Exposition in 1878 they received a gold medal; the same at Vienna and at the Centennial—in fact, in every place that they have been presented. At the Centre Co. Fair they took the premium for ladies', misses' and children's shoes, for home-made ladies' and gents' fine shoes. We leave a very small margin for competitors. We will be found at our store on Bishop street and not at the fair. Come one, come all, and examine our large stock. We propose through the fair week to give everyone a first-class bargain, cheaper than the cheapest. E. GRAHAM & SON.

—Last Saturday night two police officers in Shenandoah arrested a young man named Martin Duffy for being drunk and disorderly. Duffy resisted the officers so that they were compelled to call for help. An unknown man went to their assistance and deliberately drawing a dirk knife stabbed the prisoner twice in the left shoulder, and then escaped in the darkness before the surprised officers made any attempt to arrest him. The wound is three inches long and the attending physician deems it serious.

—It matters not the age of sufferers from colds, coughs, or croup, "Dr. Sellers' Cough Syrup is good for all alike." Price 25 cents.

KIDNEY DISEASES.—Kidney diseases afflict the greater part of the human race, and they are constantly on the increase but where the virtues of Kidney-Wort have become known, they are held in check and speedily cured. Let those who have had to constantly dose spirits of nitre and such stuff, give this great remedy a trial and be cured.

NOTICE.—This is to notify all whom it may concern. I made an entry on the farm purchased by J. P. Harris, December 1866, for the purpose of foreclosure, before two witnesses, who were prevented from doing as the law directs. I requested three attorneys, in the presence of witnesses, to get me a writ of ejectment to be served on J. P. Harris, and they would not do it, and I am now obliged to give my reasons for foreclosing the mortgage. The administrator got the right to sell before he filed his accounts. The law in the Orphans' Court is, that the administrator must give an account of all the property belonging to the estate before he can get the right to sell in order to make the sale legal, and the proceeds from the first purchase money, after all debts are paid, to be given to the person entitled thereto; and if this is not done, the administrator can give no legal deed. Therefore, J. P. Harris has no legal deed to this farm. An auditor was appointed by the Court in 1867. I was to have the money due on said mortgage when due, which was to be paid in one year without fraud or delay, and the rest of the property belonging to me was left open to a suit in law. I petitioned the Court for the money due on said mortgage. I did not get it; there should be a divorce before I could get it. The Court had no authority to place trustees over any money due me, and the farm should not have been sold by the Court. As the administrator had money to pay all debts and this of placing trustees over the mortgage money is all void in law. J. P. Harris could not sell said farm when I had a purchase money mortgage on said farm; therefore he could not give any legal deed, nor the sheriff either. All the other property of said estate has been still kept from me, as no attorney would be allowed to act for me, and it is the same now. I lost a good deal on account of the administrator not performing his duty; he had bail as administrator and in the Orphan's Court.

Therefore I now take possession of said farm on account of mortgage money not being paid, yet according to the law of Pennsylvania with regard to mortgages, and I take all the crops on said farm belonging to me, to pay my debts and for my maintenance; and as there was so much fraud on the part of the administrator.

The auditor's report was confirmed by the Court, and the mortgage was recorded.

Cookery in Common Schools.

The School Board in London, England, is resolved that the future girls shall have both a theoretical and practical knowledge of cookery. In 1877 it was made a rule of the Board that one or more of the mistresses of girls' schools, if not already competent to teach this branch of education, were strongly urged to attend a course of lessons on the subject. These lessons are given at four cooking centres, and are available to all the teachers in London. The instruction is both theoretical and practical, and none are admitted to examination in the practical department until they have passed an examination in the theoretical. When mistresses have successfully passed both examinations they receive a certificate. The examinations are of no fancy character, but are confined within the limits in which it is required that instruction shall be given to scholars. One may have a very good idea of the nature of the instruction imparted from the following questions, which, among many others, must be answered satisfactorily before any one can pass in theoretical cookery:

"Name and explain briefly the six commonest ways of cooking meat. Give a full recipe for preparing a piece of meat in any one of the ways you mention." "Name six of the most valuable fresh vegetables used in this country. Give recipes for boiling old potatoes; for boiling cauliflower and serving it with melted butter?" "What are the general rules to be observed in roasting meat? How long would it take to roast seven pounds of beef, and how would you set about it?" "How would you make leg of beef soup?" "What are the different methods of preparing beef tea? Give two of the recipes?" "How would you make a quartern of flour into bread?" "Give the recipe for a meat pie." "What is the difference between the flesh of white and oily fish? How would you stuff and bake a bald-buck?" "What is pot-au-feu? How would you prepare it with six pounds of beef? What beef would you use and what other ingredients?" "Mention some ways of re-cooking old meat." "What dishes can you prepare with Australian meat? Give the recipe for one." "Give the rules for boiling meat and the time allowed." "How would you prepare an Irish stew?" "How would you prepare a dish of beef a la mode?" "What utensils are necessary for a small kitchen?"

This is surely practical teaching and examining, and the knowledge implied ought to be within the range of even the humblest mistress of a cook-stove. Yet how many of our housewives, to say nothing of our girls, would be "plucked" if they were subject to such an ordeal as these questions imply?

The scheme for teaching adopted by the London Board is to give to the older girls in certain schools at least twelve lessons on "Food and it Preparation," and twelve on practical cookery. The practical lessons are given on one half-day in each week. They are supplied by a competent instructor appointed by the Board, who is paid £30 a year as salary. This, however, is only the beginning of what is intended. It has been resolved to provide kitchens in twenty-one schools in London, selected in districts the most convenient for the children attending. Five of these are already in operation, and attendance upon them is popular. It could scarcely be otherwise. Such instruction brings girls into a perfectly new world, and yet one strangely familiar. It is like "playing at house," while it makes the little women actual missionaries of tidiness and culinary skill to many an humble and ill-managed home. For, be it remembered, these kitchens are not fitted up with all the indispensables of a gentleman's cooking establishment. They have nothing but what is suitable to an ordinary artisan's home. The food cooked is generally sold, so there is no waste incurred. As yet only a comparatively small number can be admitted to the benefits of the system, but it is gradually extending.

Storage of Grain.

One of the most perplexing questions which meets the farmer and which sums up annually, is this question of the storage of grain; whether it will pay to sell when ready or store for higher prices. In counting up the profit accruing from storage there are a few items which are too often neglected, and which in many cases really change a sensible profit into a certain loss. Unless the garners are very convenient the expense of measuring up and carrying to them is no small item; the interest of the money must also be taken into the account—loss from rats and mice and from the shrinkage in weight must be charged on the debit side. We have known a neighbor to refuse $2.45 for wheat and demand five cents more, and we have seen him sell the very same wheat for one dollar per bushel less in little less than one year's time. In both theory and practice we find it best to sell when the grain is ready for market or when we need the money; and we are satisfied that if a careful and correct account was kept it would be found that by pursuing this plan we obtain as much, in the average of ten years, as a neighbor who stores for a higher market.

TOMATO BUTTER.—Seven pounds of ripe tomatoes, three pounds of light brown sugar, one cupful vinegar, stick cinnamon; boil slowly five or six hours roll in bread crumbs, lay in frying basket and fry brown in deep lard. Serve on platter, garnish with parsley.

Cattle Breeding.

A number of gentlemen interested in breeding cattle were present on Thursday evening last at a joint meeting of the Pennsylvania State Agricultural Society and the Philadelphia Society for the Promotion of Agriculture, at 258 South Third Street, to discuss the relative merits of various breeds of cattle.

Col. David Taggart, of Northumberland, advocated the superior excellence of the Jerseys, and asserted that in proportion to the amount of food they consume they will produce more butter than any other breed. Besides this they were more prolific breeders, he said, and instanced the case of one cow that had eight calves when she was but 7 years, 5 months and 25 days old, and gave the dates of the birth of each calf. Another cow which was 6 years old last June had her sixth calf on March 31, 1879. One heifer calved at 14 months and 20 days; another at 14 months and 23 days, and the oldest out of a herd of 8 or ten was only 10 months and 10 days old when she calved. From the most prolific breeder of these cows he had got twenty-one ounces of butter from one quart of milk, and this was churned with a dozen strokes of an egg beater.

Mr. George Blight favored the Guernsey breed in preference to Shorthorns and Devons for dairy purposes, because they united so readily with the ordinary cows. He thought, too, the Guernsey breed would take better care of themselves.

The suggestion was made that an equal number of Guernseys and Jerseys, now on exhibition at the State Fair, be milked and the cream made into butter to test the question as to which breed would produce the richest-colored butter.

The Ayrshire breed was recommended by Thomas Tasker, of Delaware county, for the quantity and quality of milk they yielded. In support of this opinion he stated one cow yielded 3,900 quarts of milk in one year; another 3,500, and several others of the herd 3,000 quarts. The quality of the milk believed to be superior to the Guernseys or Jerseys.

A Chester county farmer pinned his faith to the Durham cattle, and declared that they would average more butter the year around than the Jerseys or Guernseys.

The champions of their respective favorites then adjourned to meet on the next Monday afternoon, at 3 o'clock, at the Exhibition Building, when they will discuss the subject of "soiling."

Fruits for Food.

Henry Ward Beecher says there is no sense in the familiar motto, "Fruit is gold in the morning, silver at noon, and lead at night." His reasons for this opinion he thus states:

Because, with a limited experience, people perceive that some folks can eat fruit one time and not at another, they lay down this rule for all. The cases where the fruit is unhealthy at night is the exception.

It is true that in tropical climates heavy fruits difficult to digest, ought not to be taken at night.

But the fruits that are on our Northern farms are all healthy, as a rule. Among the excellent small fruits are currants, raspberries, strawberries, grapes, mulberries—these last are a much neglected fruit; there is no better fruit tree for children than Downing's ever-bearing mulberry.

One of them will bear fruit for eight or ten weeks steadily, constantly ripening, and pleasing all the fowls and turkeys, children and old folks. I would rather have this mulberry today than a strawberry.

The common mulberry is flat and sweet; but this has a fine sprightly acid taste, as finely combined as lemonade.

As you go up you have the apple, which is the patriarch, or the Abraham, of all fruits. If I had to choose but one fruit out of all in the world, I should decide for the apple.

For uses of every kind, early and late, winter or summer, cooked or raw, apple is king. Then comes the cherry, then the pear, then the plum and the peach.

I have not mentioned oranges, because they are not raisable in the North; but they ought to be eaten at the right time; which is all the time from getting up in the morning till you go to bed at night.

The man with whom they disagree is the exception.

Frequent Milking.

The benefits of frequent milking are summed up by a French daily paper, as quoted in the Tribune, showing a marked advantage over the practice of milking but twice daily. It appears that, "in an experiment with three milkings a day, for eleven days, a cow gave 170 quarts of milk. With two milkings the same cow gave only 146 quarts in the same number of days. Moreover, analysis showed that the milk in the first case was richer in butter globules than that in the second case, in the proportion of 4.1 to 3.5." Observations with similar results have been made in this country. The fact is well established that the shorter the time the milk remains in the udder the greater the quantity and the richer in butter, the wasting away of fats being less and the aggregate secretions more copious. The owner of the Whitestown herd of Holsteins finds it a paying practice to milk three times a day.—Mass. Ploughman.

CUCUMBER CATSUP.—Take green cucumbers, as you like them for the table, peel them and let them lie in salt water a short time. If large, cut in two and scrape out the seeds, and grate on a coarse grater. For every dozen cucumbers grate one good-sized onion. After all it, is grated pour off the water which has collected, measure it, and as much water as you pour off add the best cider vinegar. Season with pepper and salt to your taste. Should the vinegar be too sharp dilute with cucumber water: if it is too thin use less vinegar. Put in jars like fruit—no heating required.

Tell Your Wife.

The following advice from a correspondent of the Country Gentleman is well worthy of acceptance, but we would add a little more to it in the form of a suggestion, that in case you are a farmer and have no wife—Get one.

"If you are in any trouble or quandary, tell you wife—that is if you have one—all about it at once. Ten to one her invention will solve your difficulty sooner than all your logic. The wit of woman has been praised, but her instincts are quicker and keener than her reason. Counsel with your wife, your mother, or your sister, and be assured light will flash upon your darkness. Women are too commonly adjudged verdant in all but purely womanish affairs. No philosophical students of the sex thus judged them. Their intuitions, or insights, are the most subtle, and if they cannot see no cat in the meal, there is no cat there. I advise a man to keep none of his affairs a secret from his wife. Many a home has been happily saved, and many a fortune retrieved, by a man's full confidence in his wife. Woman is far more a seer and prophet than man, if she is given a fair chance. As a general rule, wives confide the minutest of their plans and thoughts to their husbands. Why not reciprocate, if but for the pleasure of meeting confidence with confidence? I am certain no man succeeds so well in the world as he who, taking a partner for life, makes her the partner of his purposes and hopes. What is wrong of his impulse or judgment, she will check and set right with her almost universally right instincts. And what she most craves and most deserves is confidence, without which love is never free from a shadow."

Household Recipes

TO CRYSTALIZE GRASSES.—One pound best alum, powdered, half a gallon of soft water, boil until dissolved, dip the grass in the solution and allow it to remain six or seven hours; remove and dry in the sun.

DRIED-APPLE CUSTARD.—One pint of dried apples, mashed and strained; two eggs beaten with the apples; sweeten and spice to taste; add a half tumbler of cream or rich milk. Bake in paste, and when done cover with a meringue.

FEATHER CAKE.—One egg, one cup of sugar, one tablespoonful of butter, half a cup of milk, one and one-half cups cups of flour, one teaspoonful of cream tartar, half a teaspoonful of soda. This combination makes a nice cake. Eat fresh.

FRUIT PUDDING.—One cup molasses, one cup sweet milk, one of suet, chopped fine, one half cup of butter, one of raisins, half cup currants, two and a half cups flour, half teaspoon soda; mix well and spice to taste, and steam two hours.

WESTPHALIA CROQUETTES.—Mix four ounces of very finely-chopped ham with one pound of mashed potatoes, well-beaten with one-half gill sweet cream, two ounces of butter, one half teaspoonful of pepper; make this into round or oval balls, dip in beaten egg

SPICED CORN BEEF.—To ten pounds beef take two cups salt, two cups molasses, two tablespoons of pulverized saltpetre, one tablespoon ground pepper, one of cloves; rub well into the beef; turn every day will be ready for use in ten days.

LEMON JUMBLES.—One pound of flour, one pound of sugar, five-eighths of a pound of butter, four eggs, the juice and grated rind of a lemon, and as little flour as will enable you to make the whole into small cakes with your hands. Bake quick.

FRENCH TAPIOCA PUDDING.—Take two ounces of tapioca and boil it in half a pint of water until it begins to soften, then add half a pint of milk by degrees, and boil until the tapioca becomes very thick; add a well-beaten egg, sugar and flavor to taste, and bake gently for three-quarters of an hour. This preparation of tapioca is superior to any other, in nourishing, and suitable for delicate children.

HUNTINGTON PUDDING.—One pint of milk and one-half cup rice put into a pan and set in a pot nearly half-full of boiling water; keep the water boiling until the rice is steamed enough to yield when pressed with thumb and finger; then add yolks of two eggs, a little lump of butter and the grated rind of a lemon; turn into a pudding dish, beat the whites to a stiff broth and stir in half a cup of sugar and the juice of the lemon; spread this frosting on the pudding and put into the oven to brown.

HOW TO LIME EGGS.—Eggs are limed by packing them in a liquid made as follows: One peck of fresh lime is slacked in sufficient water to make a thin paste; when thoroughly slacked, which will require twenty-four hours, water is added to thin it so that it can be strained through a sieve into a clean barrel, which is then filled with water; the eggs, perfectly fresh, are laid carefully into kegs and barrels, and the stirred lime liquor is poured over them, a board being floated on the top to keep the eggs under the surface. In this way eggs may be kept six months.

WHITE PEACHES are best to can, and though they cost more are really cheaper, for they are more solid, always keep better and the flavor is infinitely finer. Whether white or yellow fruit is used always leave the stone attached. Pare your peaches and leave them whole, or cut them as preferred. Pack them in jars, not too tight, and cover with cold water.—When all are packed pour off the water into a preserving kettle, and to every quart jar allow a quarter pound of sugar. Melt these together until a syrup is formed. While it is preparing set your jars (filled with peaches) in a kettle of cold water and leave them till the water boils all around them and they are thoroughly heated through, then pour the syrup on them and fit the covers on immediately.

FRIED SMELTS, FRENCH STYLE.—Carefully wipe two pounds of cleaned smelts with a dry cloth; dip them in milk, then roll them in finely powdered cracker crumbs, next in an egg beaten with a saltspoonful of salt and a quarter of a saltspoonful of pepper, and then again in cracker crumbs, fry them in enough smoking fat to cover them until they are golden brown; take them from the fat with a skimmer, lay them on a napkin, or a piece of paper, to absorb the fat, and serve them laid in rows, with a few quarters of lemon on the side of the dish.—Miss Corson's Cooking Manual.

TO KEEP EGGS THE YEAR ROUND.—About a year ago the Prairie Farmer contained a recipe for keeping eggs a long time. It was simply to pack them in a cool place, small end down, in kegs and boxes filled with finely powdered drie l earth or common road dust or sifted coal ashes. These settled down between the eggs, kept them from access to the air, and preventing evaporations of the whites or spoiling the yolk. The experiment was tried last June before the intensely hot weather that succeeded. On taking the eggs out of the packing a few days ago they were as fresh and clean looking as if fresh laid. On testing them for the table they could not be told from fresh ones. When these were put down eggs sold for six cents a dozen. They are now worth eighteen cents, or an advance of 200 per cent. This ought to pay.

BAKED LIVER.—Calves' or beef liver, laid in cold water for half an hour, dried on a towel, skinned and the sinews pulled out as far as possible; then cut in thin slices, about one-half an inch thick; give them a slight dusting with flour all around, bake on a griddle in hissing hot browned butter, on both sides, not longer than five minutes; then butter and season with spice. Liver becomes hard and indigestible if salted before baking; also, if baked over a slow fire. If no butter can be had, small cut pieces of fresh bacon, sprinkled between the slices of liver, will supply the necessary fat, and, roasted to a light brown, be an agreeable addition to the liver. Those who like onion can lay some sliced onion between and roast slightly. Never put a cover over liver, as it will become hard. It ought to be dished on a heated plate, and eaten immediately after baking.

NOODLES.—When vermicelli cannot be had, noodles make an excellent substitute. 1. Take two eggs, separate yolks from whites, only using yolks. 2. Beat up yolks thoroughly. 3. Stir eggs into a pound of best sifted flour, making a stiff paste. 4. Flour a board, and roll out the paste into thin leaves, not more than one-eighth of an inch thick. 5. As each piece is made set it aside to dry; this will take about 20 minutes. 6. Fold over the cakes in one roll, and with a very sharp knife cut through the roll at right angles, making fine shreds. Shake them so as to divide them. They can be used in any clear soup, and should be introduced about 20 minutes before the soup is ready for serving, and all cooked when the soup is on the boil. If they must be kept, they should be put away in a cool place. They are better when fresh.

News of the Day.

J. Warren Woodward, Justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, is dead.

A dispatch from Toronto says it seems probable now that Hanlan will go to Chautauqua on Thursday.

The first application for gold under the recent circular of the Treasury Department, was from the National bank at Bellaire, O.

Paul Jones' victory, 100 years ago last week, was commemorated by a display on the City Hall, at New York, of the National, State and municipal flags.

Washy Arnold and Pryor Ward, negroes, at St. Joseph, Mo., locked arms and deliberately walked into the river. They were swept away by the current and drowned.

The St. Louis and New Orleans grain houses, whose failure has been mentioned, it is announced have had no connection whatever with the house of E. F. Del Bordio, of New Orleans.

A congress of persons interested in America opened at Brussels last week. The King of Belgium, and President Blanco, of Venezuela, were present. Several countries were represented.

Dr. J. P. Lacroix, professor of languages and literature in the Ohio Wesleyan University at Delaware, died last week, aged forty-seven years. The deceased had just returned from a European trip.

Ex-Senator Ramsey, of Minnesota, who will succeed Secretary McCrary to the portfolio in the War Department, is a native of Dauphin county, this State, and for several years taught school at Kutztown, Berks county. Having been chairman of the Whig State Committee at the election of Taylor to the Presidency, he was appointed Governor of the Territory of Minnesota, to which position, when Minnesota became a State, he was elected a number of years in succession, being finally sent to the United States Senate. Many of the older residents of Kutztown well remember the young school teacher and his early struggles, who has now become so famous.

A tramp saw a horse wedged in a trestle bridge on the railroad track near Vincennes, Indiana, on Sunday night, and running back waved a burning paper in front of an oncoming engine. He saved the train and was given a place on the road.

Real Estate in Leadville.

The October Scribner contains a notable paper on Leadville, written by Ernest Ingersoll, and illustrated by Mrs. Mary Hallock Foote and Mr. J. H. Mills, from which we quote this account of an interesting phase of mining life:

All this excitement and influx of masses of men and the consequent irregular squatting anywhere upon unoccupied ground, began at once to produce discord and a fever of speculation in real estate. A certain corporation claimed to own the whole town site under a patent from the government, and tried to exact payment from every tenant; but the illegality of this was asserted, and pending decision, everybody not only laughed at the company but proceeded to buy and sell original squatter-claims as though no better title was ever in existence—a supposition probably true at that time. Town lots rose from nothing to fabulous prices in a day, and fortunes were made and opportunities neglected accordingly.

Next came a period of "jumping," that is, getting forcible or fraudulent possession of property. Men would call with a paper having a legal appearance and politely inform some man occupying the cabin they coveted that they had bought the property from the owner.

"You know, pard," they would remark, affably, "that you just settled down here 'cause it was convenient like, and nobody said nothing about it; but now the owner thinks he orter have some gold from his property, and we've bought it. We don't want to be on deasant but it looks like you'd have to vamoose."

"That's all right—no offense," the shaggy-headed cottager would reply, quietly; "but I reckon of the owner or anybody else wants this yere cabin they've got to take it, and they've got to hold over me, and get up right 'arly in the moroin', too," and he lays a loving hand upon the hilt of his revolver, while the would-be jumpers anathematize their way out of the door.

There were, however, clear cases of tenancy of land where no title was held, and here the occupant, if unruly, was likely to find his cabin timbers falling about his ears in the middle of the night, under the vigorous stroke of a band of citizens who proposed to see the real owner put in possession then and there. Heedless fellows would just as upon putting their shanties or dwelling houses anywhere in the streets and alleys set apart for public use, and then down would come a squad of police, hitch a span of horses to the underpinning and raze the obstruction in ten minutes. Hard words were a matter of course in all these little public and private transactions in real estate, and every day or two a man was shot or beaten half to death: but public opinion and the numerous witnesses quickly and loudly decided the right of the case, and the coroner's jury was very likely to formulate the popular verdict. Truth to say, the vox populi in these cases was about right. Outside of a case of robbery by "bunko thieves," if a man gets shot in Leadville, it is safe to suppose that he has got his deserts.

Speculation in town lots did not last very long, however, and now real estate is down to a pretty solid basis of value. The probability is that the future will see a decline in prices as a whole, rather than an enhancing of the value of real estate within the corporate limits, as no doubt Leadville has seen her highest tide-mark of population.

Current Curiosities.

Old Uncle Henry, the hermit of Atlanta, Ga., committed suicide the other night.

A. D. Rays, of Guffneys, South Carolina, has a beard five feet four inches long.

Miss Mary Jorden and W. B. Harrison, deaf mutes, of Murfreesboro Ark., eloped the other day.

August Barthe, a barber of Sedalia, Minn., puts in his spare time carving his own tombstone.

Citizens of Miami Valley, Ohio, all turned out to look at a white rainbow last Sunday morning.

Wm. Praigz, a Jeffersonville, Ohio miser, starved himself to death last week. $15,000 were found in his home.

Upon the death of William Goodlad, a miser, at Osborne, Kan., on August 24, it was found he had left $17,000.

Enoch Weller, of Wilmington, O., disguised himself as a negro on Monday an attempted an outrage. He was caught.

Jackson, North Carolina, is excited over a strange animal, the size of a calf, white, and with quills like a porcupine, occasionally seen near that village.

Charles Swasson, the grave digger at Cheyenne, W. T., was so miserly that he starved himself to death.—$2,500 in notes were found sewed in his clothing.

Miss Ellen Fitzpatrick eloped with a young man named Hardy from the Burkittsville Seminary, in Frederick county, Maryland, about daylight on Friday of last week.

Martel Fearing, of Plain City, O., was told by an apparition to dig for gold under an old wall on his farm. He began digging the other night and the wall caved in on him, breaking both legs.

Clam shells, oyster shells, charcoal and scraps of decayed wood found in one pile, twenty-eight feet below the surface at Jacksonville, Fla., last Saturday, tell of a prehistoric clambake, as the local geologist think.

THE DOMESTIC MONTHLY.—Such ladies as may be troubled by hesitation with regard to the style of their fall costumes, must greet the October number of this sterling magazine with peculiar delight. The large and varied array of fall styles for costumes and individual garments presented in this issue, charactarized by all the modest and tasteful elegance for which the designs represented in this magazine are specialty noted, must prove satisfactory to every taste, fastidious as it may be. In addition, there are a comprehensive review of the fashions, full and precise descriptions of the illustrated styles, fall wraps, combination costumes, etc., and the usual full reports on seasonable fabrics, trimmings, shoes and hosiery, midinery, coiffures, Lingerie, and fancy and art needlework, with profuse illustrations showing the latest styles and designs in each department. The colored plate is as usual a superb affair, and represents an exceptionally stylish and handsome street costume.

The literary department includes some very choice contributions from able writers, the principal attractions consisting of the opening chapters of a new story, called "Miss Harrington's Prediction," which promises to be very entertaining; the concluding portion of "Tried in the fire;" a very charming sketch entitled "Monsieur;" a very readable paper on "Hints;" poems by F. E. Saltus, "Howard Glyndon," Astley H. Baldwin, and others; together with the ever enjoyable Miscellany, delightful small talk, valuable small talk, valuable Household Department, excellent book reviews, humorous and thoughtful contributions of the "Mosaics Man," etc.

PROF. HARRIS' RADICAL CURE FOR SPERMATORRHŒA.

"SEMINAL PASTILLE."

A Valuable Discovery and New Departure in Medical Science, an entirely New and positively effective Remedy for the speedy and permanent Cure of Seminal Emissions and Impotency by the only way it can be, viz. Direct Application to the principal Seat of the Disease, acting by Absorption, and curing its specific influence on the Seminal Vesicles, Ejaculatory Ducts, Prostate Gland and Urethra. The use of the Remedy is attended with no pain or inconvenience, it is quickly dissolved and soon absorbed, producing an immediate soothing and restorative effect upon the sexual and nervous organizations wrecked from self-abuse and excesses, stopping the drain from the system, restoring the mind to health and sound memory, removing the Dimness of Sight, Nervous Debility, Confusion of Ideas, Aversion to Society, etc. etc., and the appearance of premature old age, thereby accompanying this trouble, and restoring perfect Sexual Vigor, where it has been deficient for years. This mode of treatment has stood the test in very severe cases, and is now a pronounced success. Drugs are too much prescribed in these troubles, and, as many can bear witness to, with bad effect, if any permanent good. There is no nonsense about this preparation. Practical observation enables us to positively guarantee that it will give satisfaction.—During the eight years that it has been in general use, we have thousands of testimonials as to its value, and it is now conceded by the Medical Profession to be the most rational means yet discovered, of reaching and curing this very prevalent trouble, that is well known to be the cause of untold misery to so many, and upon whom quacks prey with their useless nostrums and big fees. The Remedy is put up in a neat box, smooth to last a month, and sent in a plain wrapper by mail, sealed, for $3.—Two boxes (sufficient to effect a permanent cure unless in severe cases), $5—Two boxes lasting three full months, (will stop emissions and restore vigor, in the worst cases), $7—Full DIRECTIONS for using will accompany EACH BOX.

Send for a Descriptive Pamphlet giving Anatomical Illustrations, which will convince the most sceptical that they can be restored to perfect manhood, and fitted for the duties of life, as if never affected. Sent sealed for stamp to any one. Sold ONLY by the

Is a compound of the virtues of sarsaparilla, stillingia, mandrake, yellow dock, with the iodide of potash and iron, all powerful blood-making, blood-cleansing, and life-sustaining elements. It is the purest, safest, and in every way the most effectual alterative medicine known or available to the public. The sciences of medicine and chemistry have never produced so valuable a remedy, nor one so potent to cure all diseases resulting from impure blood. It cures Scrofula, and all scrofulous diseases, Erysipelas, Rose, or St. Anthony's Fire, Pimples and Facegrubs, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Tetter, Humors, Salt Rheum, Scald-head, Ringworm, Ulcers, Sores, Rheumatism, Mercurial Disease, Neuralgia, Female Weaknesses and Irregularities, Jaundice, Affections of the Liver, Dyspepsia, Emaciation, and General Debility.

By its searching and cleansing qualities it purges out the foul corruptions which contaminate the blood, and cause derangement and decay. It stimulates and enlivens the vital functions. It promotes energy and strength. It restores and preserves health. It infuses new life and vigor throughout the whole system. No sufferer from any disease whicharises from impurity of the blood need despair, who will give AYER'S SARSAPARILLA a fair trial. Remember, the earlier the trial, the speedier the cure.

Its recipe has been furnished to physicians everywhere; and they, recognizing its superior qualities, administer it in their practice.

For nearly forty years AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has been widely used, and it now possesses the confidence of millions of people who have experienced benefits from its marvellous curative virtues.

Sunday School Convention.

There was a Sunday School convention held at Gray's M. E. Church on Thursday and Friday of last week. The first session opened at 6.30 P. M., Thursday, and was called to order by the president, Rev. G. W. Bouse. John Woodstock was elected secretary, in the absence of the regular secretary, John H. Lever. The address of welcome, made by Rev. Creighton, was well received, and very happily responded to by president Bouse.

The subject for this session,—"How the Sunday School may retain the larger scholars and youths?" was very fully discussed by Harry C. Love, Rev. A. M. Creighton and others, after which the convention adjourned until Friday morning at ten o'clock.

On Friday morning the convention was opened at the hour fixed, Rev. R. C. Crittenden making the opening prayer. Several subjects were discussed during the morning session, which discussion was participated in by Revs. R. Crittenden, A. M. Creighton and J. B. Moore, and by S. D. Gray and Col. D. H. Hastings.

The afternoon was set apart for the children's meeting, and at 2.30 P. M. the church was crowded. Addresses were made by S. D. Gray, D. H. Hastings, and John G. Love, Esqs., and Rev. R. Crittenden.

The evening session convened at seven o'clock, and was opened by the usual religious service. The church was crowded beyond its capacity, many persons having to stand, and quite a number being unable to get into the church at all. The topics for discussion at this session were: "How can we improve Sunday School singing?" "Should the Sunday School be closed in winter?" and "What preparation should a teacher make?" The discussion was indulged in by S. D. Gray, Rev. A. M. Creighton, W. I. Gray, Charles Keith, and others, and was quite spirited and interesting.

The singing, under the management and directorship of Isaac Gray, was rendered by the choirs of Gray's and Ross' M. E. Churches, with Miss Emma Love presiding at the organ. The music was one of the attractive features of the convention, and added very greatly to its interest.

The convention was certainly a success, and reflects great credit upon its management, and we have no doubt will will be fruitful in stimulating to renewed effort in Sunday school work in that community. The hospitality of the people was most cordial and in keeping with their good reputation in that particular.

—At the jewelry store of F. C. Richards, High street, opposite Bush Arcade, can be seen one of the largest and finest stocks of jewelry and silverware, to be found anywhere in Centre county. Clocks of all sizes and shapes, and at prices to correspond with the condition of your wallet; the latest styles of watches, in gold, silver and nickel; also the electric watches with self-illuminating face, enabling one to see the time in the night or in the darkest room; watch chains and charms, and all kinds of silverware. Repairing neatly and cheaply executed. Call and examine the new goods before purchasing elsewhere, and save money. Mr. Richards is a clever gentleman, and deals squarely with all.

—Ladies, when you are out shopping, don't fail to call at the Bee Hive one price exclusive dry goods store, and you will have no occasion to go any further. Everything in this store is arranged so conveniently that you can see at a glance just what you want, and accommodating clerks will always pay you prompt attention. Mr. Bauland himself is a jolly, good fellow, and will show you everything he has in his establishment, no matter if you buy a skein of yarn or a twelve dollar cloak.

—Our merchants are making preparations for a lively run of trade during the Fair, and they no doubt will realize their expectations. No need to go to the cities for what you can buy at home. Our stores are loaded down with goods.

—Mr. J. C. Harper and his bride returned home on Saturday night from their wedding tour, and took rooms at the Bush House, where the Mountain City band serenaded them later in the evening.

Wedding Anniversary at Centre Furnace.

Centre Furnace was, on the evening of the 22d ult., the scene of one of the most pleasant affairs imaginable. The occasion was the celebration of the forty-third anniversary of Mr. Abram Houser's wedding. His children thought it a good time for a family reunion, as well as a celebration of their parents' nuptials. When all the preparations had been made and everything was in readyness, those who were to take part in the festivities drove up to the house and quietly took possession, telling Mr. and Mrs. H. that for the evening they desired to take charge of affairs themselves. Presently along came the Lemont band, and when near the house started up a lively and appropriate air. The old gentleman, as soon as he could get an opportunity, inquired what it all meant, and when told the object of the gathering, said that was just the way they did when he was young. While the band was playing, and hand shaking was going on, the daughters of the surprised couple busied themselves in unpacking baskets and setting the table, after which all were invited to partake. And, oh! such a feast! Cakes, pies, ice cream—everything. Our informant says it is impossible to do justice, in words, to the delicious viands that were set before the assembled ones.

Taking it all together, the affair was a grand surprise, and one of the most pleasant evenings spent at Centre Furnace for a long time.

Mr. Abram Houser is a son of Martin Houser, who settled in this county about the year 1780, and is the oldest living relation of that name. He was married in 1836 to Elizabeth Rumberger. They have four children and ten grandchildren, who were all present on this occasion.

—Not the least of interest of all the exhibits at the Fair this week will be that of John Powers & Son, boots and shoes. This firm, which has a world-wide reputation, will exhibit some of their first-class goods, as follows:—Four pairs of gents' gaiters—not made purposely to exhibit at the Fair, but intended for some of our young men who are matrimonially inclined, and know where to get their stylish goods; one pair of the heaviest soled stitched boots ever exhibited on the continent; one pair of lumberman's driving boots; one pair of ladies' French kid button gaiters. All the above goods are home made. This firm will also exhibit some city goods. If you attend the Fair be sure and examine this exhibit, and then come into town, stop at Powers & Son, and get your measure taken.

—On Friday last the flooring in the third story of Wm. D. Smith's grist mill, at Unionville, gave way, precipitating eight hundred bushels of wheat to the floor below, which was also crushed in, letting the grain and timbers through into the race which flows beneath the building. Luckily no one was at work in that part of the mill at the time of the accident. The loss is estimated at about $500.

—The new advertisement of J. H. Bauland will be found in this issue. Look it over carefully, decide what goods you are in need of, and then start right off for the Bee Hive and purchase them. Everything that can be had at a first-class dry goods establishment can be found on the counters of the Bee Hive, and at such low prices that you will be filled with astonishment.

—Some workmen engaged in quarrying stone for the new penitentiary at Huntingdon recently unearthed some fossil shells, which are said to be very fine specimens. Huntingdon is bound to get up something every month or two to attract attention.

—Mr. W. H. Houser, wife and two children, from Nebraska, registered at the Garman House on Friday. Mr. Houser formerly resided near Houserville, this county, and has been living in the West eight years.

—A special examination of the teachers of Centre county to fill vacancies will be held in the superintendent's office, Bellefonte, to-morrow morning (Thursday).

—Rev. Dr. Calder, of the State College, preached to the Baptists of this place on Sunday evening. Rev. Aldred, of Clearfield, occupied the pulpit in the morning.

—Mr. Conrad Deihl, of Howard, fell from a scaffold on to a separator, on the 17th ult. He was considerably bruised, but not seriously injured.

—Mr. Joseph Ross, of Pleasant Gap, accompanied by members of his family, has been visiting friends in Jefferson county.

—Best prints at Lyon & Co.'s for 5½ cts. a yard.

Gone to Meet her Father.

We regret that it is our lot to chronicle this week the death of Miss Rose Shoemaker, daughter of John Kidd Shoemaker, whose obituary appeared in our last issue. Miss Shoemaker departed this life at 1 o'clock on Sunday morning last. She passed away very quietly, and the expression which settled upon her face during the last few moments was one of sweet peace and contentment, showing that she was free from all pain.

Miss Shoemaker had been fading gradually, from consumption, for several months, and her death, like that of her father's, which probably hastened the end, was expected at any time. She was a very estimable lady—kind and gentle, not only to her parents, but towards all those with whom she was wont to associate. Her age was about thirty years. The funeral took place yesterday afternoon.

—On Thursday of last week the marriage of Mr. Thomas C. Houtz to Miss Maggie C. Duffy was solemnized at the residence of the bride's parents, in College township, Rev. J. Yutzy, of Pleasant Gap, performing the ceremony. Our correspondent, who we judge was present, says the event was a very pleasant one. About forty guests witnessed the ceremony, and after the newly-wedded party had received the congratulations of their many friends, they were invited to partake of a sumptuous repast, which appeared to be appreciated by all. Mr. Houtz is a graduate of the State College.

—In a local for E. Graham & Son, in last weeks issue of the REPUBLICAN, our compositor made a serious mistake by the omission of one word. Mr. Graham intended to say that they would be found at their store, on Bishop street, but not at the Fair, while we made them say that they would be at their store and at the Fair. We are sorry we made the mistake, and hope this correction will let his friends know that he will not have any exhibit at the Fair.

—There is a man in Indiana so thin from the effects of chills, that when the sheriff is after him he crawls into his rifle, and watches his adversary through the tube.—Forrest National. That will do for a thin man, but we've got a fat man down here so big that when the tax-collector gets after him, he simply turns his back and it keeps the collector busy for a day and a half to walk around to his face.

—The Lock Haven Democrat contains this snaky yarn: "A snake created some consternation at the residence of Caleb Yocum, in Spruce Hill township, Juniata county, by falling from the chimney into a kettle of applebutter boiling in the fire place. The applebutter was not considered palatable and was thrown away."

—Mr. Elwin Straub, of Spring township, raises potatoes that are potatoes. Two pounds and five ounces is the weight of one we saw that was raised at his place, and he's got any amount more just like it. Three or four of them would keep a boarding house running for a week.

—Here is the way they learn to spell in Cohoes, New York: When a girl misses a word in the schools the boy who corrects her is sternly directed by the schoolma'am to kiss her on the spot. We'll bet there are some mighty bad spellers among the girls of Cohoes.

—Wet, muddy, cold and generally disagreeable weather never prevents people from going to Sechler's for their groceries, no matter if they have to walk three or four miles from the country. They are bound to have their good groceries.

—The Millheim Journal would like to know if it wouldn't be a good idea to suspend Sunday Schools during the chestnut season. There would be no more harm in that than in postponing a funeral to attend a circus.

—A young lady, whose name we did not learn, fell a distance of about ten feet down the stairs of the observatory on Nittany mountain, on the day of the Grangers' picnic. She received no serious injuries.

—The dwelling house on Howard street, belonging to Mr. E. C. Hunter, has been greatly improved in appearance by repainting.

—Ye stylish young men, if you want a nobby suit call at Lyon & Co.'s.

—The new fall bonnet, for the ladies, it is said will be "immense."

—The best and cheapest black cashmeres at Lyon & Co.'s.

—The minstrel show last week did not give entire satisfaction.

—Best muslins at Lyon & Co.'s for 6¼ and 7 cts. per yard.

—No box-worn goods sold at Louis Doll's.

A Mexican Soldier Gone.

Mr. Benjamin Brown Hough, of this place, died last Thursday morning, aged 55 years. Mr. Hough had been in feeble health for over a year, and was confined to his house for several weeks. He served as a soldier in the Mexican war, and was also in the rebellion. He was a pleasant gentlemen and a good, law-abiding citizen, and his loss will be felt by all. He leaves a wife and four children, two sons and two daughters. The funeral took place on Saturday, and was conducted by the Knights of Pythias, of which order he was a member of good standing. The remains of the deceased were interred in the Quaker burying ground.

—Frank Chamberlain, Esq., is a first-rate fellow to get up amusements for the Fair, and is a good lawyer, too, but when it comes to riding Garman's ponies, it's out of his line. He attempted to ride one of these fiery steeds to the Grangers' picnic, but dismounted in great haste in less than ten seconds after he got aboard. You see the little pony didn't care a thing about the Grangers, and opened fire in three or four places.

—An effort is being made by the friends of Mr. Mark Forcey, of Burnside township, to secure for him a pension. Mr. Forcey was a soldier in the Union army, and engaged in a number of hard-fought battles. In one engagement he was badly wounded in the shoulder, from the effects of which he is unable to do any work. He is justly deserving of a pension, and we hope his friends will be successful.

—Mr. John Dawson, the High street baker, interestes himself in the temperance cause to no small extent—he having furnished all the ice used by the Centennial Temperance Club during the entire summer gratuitously. John never does anything half-way—that is, hardly ever.

—The programme of amusements for the Fair is large and varied, and comprises everything imaginable in the amusement line. Those who attend the Fair should book themselves on such matters. Programmes can be had by applying to Frank Chamberlain, Esq., Supt. of department.

—The engine house of the new planing mill at Eleb's lumber yard is completed. The engine and boilers are in position, and will be ready to steam up as soon as the shafting is arranged. We are informed that operations will begin at the mill in about two weeks.

—At last, after upsetting one hundred and fifty-seven people and corrupting the morals of as many more, that treacherous hole in the pavement, by the Conrad House, has been obliterated. It is well.

—The Center Reporter talks about a potato brought to that office weighing 2¼ pounds. The REPUBLICAN's big sweet potato, raised by Mr. Comly, of Pleasant Gap, will see that and go a pound better.

Bellefonte Markets.

BELLEFONTE, Oct. 1, 1879.

The curb market was well attended yesterday morning. Produce brought fair prices for cash; but there was a scarcity of eggs and gilt edged butter, which are always in demand at this season.

WHEAT.—The wheat market is firm, and prices have advanced ten cents per bushel. The mills are now in the lead in prices, and will of necessity keep so, as there is no surplus of wheat for shipment this year. The crop is short of the necessary requirements for the mills or home consumption, which makes a brisk demand among buyers.
